Last Hope To Reach Him

Youth Needs Pool Player

By MARY BURCH DTH Staff Writer

Are you a guy who likes to play pool?

A junior high school age, underprivileged, boy desperately needs your help. He is on the verge of being sent to reform training school because of his lack of motivation.

The last hope of reaching this boy, according to Sandy Blount, head of Upward Bound, is through his interest in pool.

boy and play pool with him," Blount said.

The boy lives in the Efland community, near Hillsborough. His father is dead and his mother works full time. He has two older brothers, both who "We need someone who is have an embittered and willing to devote even one disillusioned attitude toward afternoon a week to get this school and life in general.

to me," Blount said, "because she felt, as I do, that the boy can be helped. He quits school because he is not successful and not academically inclined. "Everything about his life is gloomy. There isn't even a television set in his home. He is depressed and therefore does nothing but mope. The less he does however, the less he wants to do."

By getting the boy away from his home environment to play pool, it would cheer him and perhaps provide the basis to reach him and convince him to continue school, Blount said. "Unless some action is taken on the boy's behalf to show that he is able to sustain going back to school, the judge is going to have him put in a reform training school," Blount said. "In his present state he would come out even more depressed and his chances of leading a productive life would be practically nil. We have to catch him now while there is still hope.'

Anyone interested in devoting time to helping this young boy should contact 'Help' at 7 and 9:30 p.m. in Sandy Blount at 933-2279.

Amid laughter, shivers and exhausted-breathlessness, the five newly initiated sisters of Kappa Alpha Theta ran up and down Polk Place Friday afternoon flying-ah trying to fly-their kites.

The kite fly, a tradition for Theta initiation, was postponed last week because of rain. Each Theta must fly her kite or try to fly it until it

"Watch the wind," one sister advised from the steps of South Building. "It's getting ready to blow . . . I'll hold the kite and you run... go ... faster, I think it's going to fly . . . hold it, it just died."

Over and over again, from South Building, the five initiates ran with their hopes and kites rising five feet, ten feet, fifteen feet (maybe) and then a loud crash . . . and sighs of disappointment and condolences . . . " It almost got up, maybe if you . . . well, run a little faster."

"Watch out, it's falling," someone yelled. The kite drifted down on the campus policeman who was amusingly watching the kite flyers.

"Run up the steps, I think you've got it . . . it's still up, jerk it a little . . . watch out for that seeeeep . . . Are you all right? Did it hurt? You aren't going to let South Building stand in the way of your kite, are you," someone laughed. "Wait a minute, Linda . . it's caught . . . craaaaash."

"Oh, my kite," "We can fix it I think, anybody got any chewing gum." "Hey, look up, I want to get
