SOC Plans Mass Meeting Tonight

By BRYON CUMMING DTH Staff Writer

The non-election campaign, the fight for visitation, and plans for the state-wide conference are among the major topics to be discussed at the mass Southern Students Organizing Committee (SSOC) meeting, to be held tonight at 7:30 in Gerrard Hall.

Sam Austell, a SSOC organizer, says the mass meeting will gather all four action groups "to plan and coordinate future actions."

The University and Society Committee is sponsoring a negative election campaign, which will climax on November 5 when students will have the opportunity to vote "no" on the candidate of their choice.

Austell believes that,

"students have a right to expect some action on this issue very soon." He also believes that the meeting of the student-faculty committee on coed visitation "should be an open meeting.

NSA President, Bob Powell, told UNC students Tuesday night that Chicago would prove more of a turning point in the youth revolution than Berkeley or Vietnam.

Addressing an intimate audience in Memorial Hall in the culmination speech of "Time-Out Day," Powell said that Chicago had negated the position assumed by students in dealing with political problems.

Powell described an incident on the Colorado State campus where "clean-cut typical American kids" took over their student center and violated state law to get new beer regulations.

The implication of this incident, said Powell, is that Chicago destroyed previous assumptions about the means to effect change, and made students angry.

Chicago also reveals the current attitude of adults, he said. He quoted Arthur Miller as saving "Parents hate their kids.

The prevailing anti-youth feeling is resulting in repressive measures by federal and state authorities, said Powell. He noted that representatives at the NSA Congress had been offered money by FBI agents to "spy" at the Congress. Powell said that the HCUA (House Committee on InAmerican Activities) hearings which which are scheduled to investigate Chicago would cover a large range of student activities.

"Students can't trust Humphrey, Nixon or any 'liberal' politicians," claimed the former UNC student body president.

"The Science Departments historically have been less imminent than Humanities," have come very fast in recent years and are now very solid."

Another great attribute of Carolina is its School of Public Health, one of the few such institutions in the country.

The fine tradition of the Carolina quality of education makes it not accidental that many outstanding faculty are attracted here. "After all, professors with any personal aspirations don't want to be associated with mediocre colleagues, in a place where there is no educational ferment," Dr. Ingram believes.

"People just don't vant to go to the University of Southern Mississippi, even if salary. It's a mediocre institution and everyone knows it."

Perpetuating this tradition-coupled with the multiplied onrush of students seeking graduate degrees-is where the problems begin.

considerably expand the graduate enrollment," Ingram said. "The ultimate ceiling for enrollment at Chapel Hill is large growth considering the growth of the past 10 years.

"However by 1975 graduate students will comprise 30 per cent of the student body. We've got to provide additional library and research facilities and space and expand the existing facilities we have in order to be able to compete for the quality of students we have attracted since the close of World War II."

"In no sense will there be a quality of instruction will remain evenly distributed." "As the ratio of graduate he noted, "but the Sciences students increases, it will certainly be necessary to provide more teachers in relation to the entire student body. Therein lies one of the two major problems we are currently encountering, and it may become more of a problem as the graduate ratio increases."

The other problem is the feeling among graduate students of disassociation from the activities of the undergraduate student body. "Part of the tendency of specialization is detachment from the mainstream of the University," Dr. Ingram acknowledges. "Student government and other they get a $25,000 annual organizations are strongly oriented toward undergrads, and I don't see why this should be so."

The great hope for closing the gap between the majority of the university, the undergrads, and the minority which largely is accountable "The University plan for the for its academic reputation, the next 10 years is to graduate students, is the fledging Graduate Student Association. The first real binding organization of grad students, it has worked hard in 18,000-which is not a terribly its first year of existence to obtain a compatible relationship between the two branches of UNC.
