

UNC Challenges Third-Ranked Kentucky

By OWEN DAVIS
DTH Sports Editor

LEXINGTON, Ky.—It's called the Bludgrass State, but to Carolina's basketball team tonight it could be more appropriately named The Snakepit.

The scene is the state of Kentucky, whose entire basketball-loving population will center its attention on Memorial Coliseum when the Tar Heels from over the mountains play their favorite boys, the Kentucky Wildcats.

Gametime is 8 p.m. An audience of 11,500 will see the action live, but Adolph Rupp's third-ranked team will know several million more want a victory over North Carolina almost as much as a daily-double winner at Churchill Downs.

Reason for the intense interest in the Carolina-Kentucky battle boils down to two points. First, the Tar Heels are second-ranked nationally, and a Wildcat win would probably more them into that position.

Second, Carolina has defeated Kentucky three straight times, and nobody, not even Johnny Wooden with Lew Alcindor and the Los Angeles Lakers, does that to one of Rupp's teams. So the stage is set.

It's with a backdrop of white-fenced horse farms, America's original bourbon distilleries (and bourbon is the country's ONLY native beverage), and some of the best gambling stakes anywhere. But the one mint julep will bow out to basketball tonight.

It might have been the top game of the regular season is first-ranked UCLA wasn't playing fourth-ranked Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind. tonight too.

Both teams are undefeated after two games. Carolina, 28-4 last year, has defeated Oregon twice. Kentucky, 22-5 in 1967-68 has downed Xavier and Miami of Ohio.

The Tar Heels are favored, although the Wildcats have a 212-27 record on their home court.

But Kentucky will play with two sophomores and without team leader Mike Pratt, who broke a finger in pre-season drills.

Pratt, a forward, last year averaged 14.1 points a game. In his place will be Mike Casey, usually a guard. Casey was the team's leading scorer last season with a 20.1 average, but at 6-4 is a small forward.

Soph guard Terry Mills, 6-2, takes Casey's backcourt position alongside Phil Argento, a regular last year until he broke an ankle.

In the frontcourt with Casey is 6-6 Larry Steele, a soph who weighs only 174, and center Dan Issel, 6-8½, was a 16.4 scorer last year.

The Wildcats' front line of 6-8, 6-6 and 6-4 will appear midget-sized next to Tar Heel front liners Rusty Clark, 6-10, Bill Bunting, 6-8 and Charlie Scott, 6-5.

Scott, averaging 31 points a game after two contests, may be an All-American. Bunting played the best basketball of his life against Oregon with a 15.5 scoring average and 10.5 rebounding mark.

At guards will be two seniors, Dick Grubar and Gerald Tuttle. Tuttle is a newcomer to the starting five tonight, and he is from down the road at London, Ky. Coach Dean Smith is counting on the added incentive of playing before the home folks to boost Tuttle to a peak performance.

It will take a super-high Tuttle and four turned-on cohorts to pull off a Tar Heel victory, because Rupp, the Baron of Basketball, is waiting, and few beat him at his own game.

Semester Change Asked

By J. D. WILKINSON
DTH Staff Writer

The editor of the Technician, North Carolina State's daily student newspaper, claimed in an editorial Nov. 20 that Chapel Hill merchants constitute the only stumbling-block to proposed plans for revising the Consolidated University schedule so that the first semester could be terminated before Christmas.

The editorial said that by beginning the fall semester two weeks earlier, it could be completed before the Christmas break, thus restoring the "continuity (which) is lost in many courses" because as the schedule stands now, "the latter half of fall semester is chopped into three chunks."

A schedule change "is no new idea," according to the editorial. In fact, says the column, the change is already widely favored at the University campuses in Raleigh, Greensboro and Charlotte.

However, the Consolidated University Board of Trustees has ruled that the four campuses should all operate on the same schedule and so the failure of the Chapel Hill branch to support the change is preventing the other schools from instituting it.

The reason for the opposition by the University at Chapel Hill, according to the Technician editor, is the (Continued on page 4)

WHOOPS!—Friday might have been warm enough for some things, but obviously it wasn't warm enough for either of these two coeds to keep their hands on the football.

Free Speech Hike Today

Planned By Anti-War Group

A march and rally in support of freedom of speech for GI's, sponsored by the United Anti-War Mobilization Front (UAWMF), will start in the Morehead Planetarium parking lot at 1:30 p.m. Saturday. The march will proceed down Franklin St. to the rally which will be held at a Baptist Church in west Chapel Hill. Among the speakers scheduled for the rally are military veterans.

The UAWMF has been working with certain servicemen from Ft. Bragg on the issue of freedom of speech. On Nov. 11, one GI visited Chapel Hill in uniform to sit at a display table sponsored by UAWMF.

On Nov. 16, 12 students, 11 from UNC and one from N.C. State, went to Ft. Bragg in connection with a UAWMF effort to distribute anti-war leaflets. Two of the students attempted to pass out the leaflets, and all 12 (including a DTH reporter), were arrested.

According to Charles Mann, state information director for UAWMF, the students arrested at Ft. Bragg were convinced that GI's are restricted in their freedom of speech when they found that all Ft. Bragg servicemen were restricted to their barracks at the time when the students first arrived.

The march planned by the UAWMF will be held on Dec. 7, the 27th anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day. According to Mann, "the purpose of the march is to make clear our support of GI's rights to the first amendment.

"From the actions of the past few weeks in which UAWMF has been in existence, it has been clearly demonstrated to us that GI's lack even the fundamental right to freedom of speech.

"It has been further demonstrated that civilians who come in contact with GI's have their rights to freedom of speech threatened also."

Double Jeopardy Amendment Fails

By REBEL GOOD
DTH News Editor

An amendment to include in the campus code referendum a proposal to eliminate double punishment under the student judiciary was defeated by Student Legislature Thursday night.

The vote was 23-4 against the proposal.

The amendment, introduced by Legislators John Kelly, Rafael Perez and Joan Davison, would place before the students the question:

"Students who are prosecuted by civil or criminal courts shall be immune from prosecution and punishment by the student judiciary for the same act."

Kelly, Perez, Davison and Chris Bean voted for the amendment.

Students would approve or disapprove this policy.

The amendment was introduced due to the "feeling among students that they want to be able to decide for themselves whether or not they can be tried and punished by both civil and student judicial systems for the same act," according to Kelly.

Basic opposition to the amendment was the lack of time available before the referendum (Dec. 17) in which to inform the students of its implications. "A lot of work still must be done before the students can decide," said Legislator Charles Jeffress who opposed the amendment.

"We must study the effects of no double jeopardy on student government and the University community first," he said.

"There is nothing to be lost in waiting, but much to be gained," said Legislator Bill Lee, who said he favored the proposal but voted against it. "Given time we can gain faculty support and make the students more aware of the consequences," he reasoned.

"We have plenty of time between now and the referendum to inform the student body and the administration of the implications of no double punishment," said Kelly in answering Jeffress and Lee.

'Judiciary Needs Total Overhaul'

In a statement issued Friday, Student Body President Ken Day leveled an attack on the judicial system at Carolina.

The text of the statement reads, "It is quite obvious that the Student Judiciary of this campus is not only in need of change but more accurately in need of total overhaul."

"The action of Student Legislature this week takes a small step in the right direction by recognizing that our judiciary has been far out of step with the rest of the student body and indeed, the rest of the civilized world.

"Unfortunately, however, the legislative action falls disastorously short of adequate remedy to the ills of a judicial system that functionally died years before most of us arrived on this campus.

"The time has come to free ourselves from the chains of past assumptions and to ask what is it we want to accomplish with the Student Judiciary, why it should exist, and how do we make it work properly.

"It is imperative that all who feel a stake in the Student Judiciary join in the hard work of thinking through what it is we really need and how to make it work.

"I urge all who are vitally concerned with the future of the Student Judiciary to join in a work session next Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 in Roland Parker II.

"The basic assumptions underlying the Honor Code and the Campus Code no longer maintain the respect of the respect of the student body as was ostensibly the case at one time.

"We can no longer live with a judicial system based on assumptions about the nature of the University and the nature of human conduct that have long since passed the scene.

"As we raise these questions, we must face squarely what many have called "fundamental double jeopardy."

"This term has been used to mean many different things—by different people:

- 1) What is covered by a code,
- 2) what are the geographic limits of a code, or
- 3) what are the overlapping jurisdictions of a code with laws enacted by the larger society.

"In the interest of the student body, we must clarify the meaning of the indictment of Double Jeopardy and its impact on the Judiciary as we would have it.

"To provide for this clarification, the Legislature chose to divide the so called Double Jeopardy issue from the other question to be voted on December 17.

"These proposals include: 1) Redefinition of the Honor Code to cover lying, cheating, or stealing of an academic nature only,

2) Redefinition of the Campus Code to make it an offense to impare significantly the welfare or educational opportunities of others in the University Community,

3) Limitation of the Campus Code in geographic area to campus and its environs and in time to the term for which the student is enrolled,

4) Investing the Attorney General with the power to investigate all cases and at the request of the injured party or if there be extenuating

Infirmary Reports Four Cases Of Hong Kong Flu

By J.D. WILKINSON
DTH Staff Writer

An official of the University Student Infirmary said Friday four cases of the new Asian variety of influenza have been reported at the infirmary.

The highly-contagious nature of the illness, which first appeared in Hong Kong, has prompted national public health officials to warn of a probable nation-wide outbreak of epidemic proportions this winter.

Dr. James Taylor of the student infirmary said Friday officials at North Carolina Memorial Hospital and the infirmary have been making "elaborate plans" since early fall for combating the possible influenza outbreak.

He said the infirmary has only 2,000 doses of the anti-influenza vaccine developed especially for the Hong Kong variety.

The Student Health Service ordered a much larger quantity, but manufacturers, overloaded with orders for the vaccine, were able to supply only the 2,000 doses.

Dr. Taylor said the vaccine would be offered Tuesday to students with chronic ailments such as asthma, diabetes, heart trouble, and other diseases of the same nature.

Non-high-risk students will have the opportunity to obtain anti-flu shots beginning Wednesday morning at 9 in the infirmary. Inoculations will be given until 7 p.m. with students receiving the vaccine on a first-come, first-served basis.

Students will be informed of any new shipments of the vaccine which may arrive.

The vaccine requires two to three weeks to take effect.

Students who are allergic to eggs and those who might have an acute febrile (feverish) illness are advised not to receive the vaccine.

Ford To Speak Monday

GERALD FORD

Michigan Congressman Gerald Ford will speak in Memorial Hall Monday night at 8.

Ford's topic, announced today by Carolina Forum chairman Scott Goodfellow, will be "A Look Back and A Look Forward—The Future as Viewed Through The 1968 Elections."

Ford served as Minority Leader in the House of Representatives during the last Congress. This past summer he gave the Republican National Convention in Miami.

"Congressman Ford has made great efforts to help the Republican Party gain the strong foothold it now has in North Carolina and is a good friend of the state," said Goodfellow.

Ford will arrive at Raleigh-Durham airport late Monday afternoon and then be guest-of-honor at a dinner attended by members of the administration and students. The evening speech will be a presentation of the Carolina Forum. Following, Ford will depart immediately by private plane to Michigan.

The program will be the second Carolina Forum presentation of the year. Former Governor William Scranton spoke in Memorial Hall on November 14th.
