

YSA Meeting

An organizational meeting of the Young Socialist Alliance will be held tonight at 7:30 in 111 Murphy Hall to discuss what socialism is and what the new group is going to be concerned with.

The Daily Tar Heel

76 Years Of Editorial Freedom

Steinfeld Speech

Dr. Jeffrey I. Steinfeld of MIT will speak on "Laser Studies of Vibrational Energy Transfer" at the UNC Chemistry Colloquium this afternoon at 4 in 207 Venable Hall.

Volume 76, Number 75 74

CHAPEL HILL, NORTH CAROLINA, TUESDAY, JANUARY 7, 1969

Founded February 23, 1896

Tar Heel Crusade

What you see is Carolina's Bill Vandenberg blocking a Steve Vandenberg shot against Duke Saturday in a Tar Heel victory which culminated four games over the holidays. Carolina did as expected, winning three and losing once, but what was not expected was a loss to St. John's instead of UCLA. The big event, UNC versus Lew Alcindor in Madison Square Garden which planeloads of fans went to New York to view, never developed. What they saw instead was scenic subways, Grand Prix racing among cabbies and liquor-by-the-drink everywhere but in the Horn & Hardart automat. Further details are on pages 3 and 4.

Students Vote In Five Code Changes

By TOM SNOOK
DTH Staff Writer

Five proposed amendments to the student Constitution at Carolina easily passed at the referendum held before the Christmas vacation.

The five proposals dealt with revisions in the Honor Code, Campus Code and of the Attorney General's duties.

These changes are now part of the Constitution, and the new forms of the rules will be used as guidelines for violations and prosecutions of either code.

With respect to the Honor Code, the new law will cover only those acts of lying, cheating or stealing of an academic nature.

Three major revisions greatly changed the nature of the Campus Code from its previous form of "gentlemanly or ladylike conduct at all times."

In its new form, students are required to act so as not to impair significantly the welfare or academic opportunities of others in the University community.

A limitation was placed on the code making it effective on the University campus or in its environs during the term for which the person is enrolled or while officially representing the University.

The final amendment changed the role of the Attorney General. He is now charged to investigate all possible violations of either code, and at the request of the injured party or if there are extenuating circumstances, and if there is sufficient evidence, to prosecute the violation.

According to Student Body President Ken Day, all items on the referendum were passed by significant margins, although the turnout was less than desired.

Day felt that the outcome of the vote showed the students' interest in changing the Judiciary to bring it up to date with values and concerns which can be respected by the Student Body.

"However," he stated, "the amendments as adopted do not complete the work in judicial reform. There are still unanswered questions and ambiguities of what is expected in student conduct in certain cases.

"It is my sincere desire that the drafting commission chaired by Alan Albright which is working with the Faculty Committee on Student Discipline will shortly arrive at a better statement of conduct than that which we now have."

"While we have made improvements, there is a lot of work yet to be done, and we are working hard to move to a vote on the upcoming proposals sometime in February.

"In addition, I received a petition calling for a vote on a proposed amendment dealing with overlapping jurisdictions."

"I am asking the Elections Board to validate the signatures on the petition so that we may move to a vote on this question at the same time if the petition is found to be in order."

Recruitment Of Negroes Advocated By Committee

The Faculty Council of the University on Dec. 18 issued a report which involved six months of preparation and suggested that more Negro students be recruited to attend the University.

A committee headed by Dean Dickson Phillips of the UNC Law School recommended:

(1) The University should initiate centrally directed efforts to increase the proportion of Negro students in all parts of the institution.

(2) A talent search to find those Negro students who qualify under present academic admission standards be the first step in this above program.

(3) An experimental program should be adopted to seek students, regardless of color, who do not meet admission standards. "The aim should be to learn how to identify worthy and well-motivated students, whatever their race, who by reason of cultural, economic, or educational disadvantage have had clearly adequate intellectual capacities stunted to the point that by regular admissions standards they are inadmissible," wrote the committee in explaining "high risk students" in limited numbers.

(4) Negro personnel of assistant director rank should be added to offices of admission and student aid.

Chairman Phillips said that the recommendation of talent searches and high-risk admissions should apply generally and equally to all colleges and schools of the University, and not just the General College.

At present there are 108 Negro undergraduates, 148 graduate students (including off-campus graduate centers), one law, five medicine, and 0 dentistry students).

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson emphasized that the greatest need is for more effective opportunities for Negroes in professional education in State institutions, some of which is available only at this University. He reported that several years ago he and Dean Brauer of the School of Dentistry made vigorous efforts to solicit Negro applications, with little success.

The members of the Faculty Council committee were Phillips; Prof. Carroll Hollis of the English Department; Earle Wallace of the Political Science Department; Daniel A. Okun of the Public Health School; and J. Frank McCormick of the Botany Department.

Professors Blast New Left Takeover

Twenty-four literature and language professors from UNC

and Duke have sent a letter to the executive council of the Modern Language Association, denouncing what they consider to be an attempted seizure of power by "New Left" language faculty members at the MLA annual convention in New York Dec. 27-29.

About 300 faculty members and graduate students packed the final business session of the organization and gained passage of four resolutions calling for:

1) Condemnation of the United States for Viet Nam.
2) Abolition of the draft.
3) Condemnation of "individuals and institutions" who use the law to "harass and repress certain writers"—including Eldridge Cleaver, Andrei Sinilavski, Yuri Daniel and Lefroi Jones.

4) Repeal of the "anti-riot" provisions in Public Laws 90-550, and 90-557, and especially of Section 504 of Public Law 90-575, which would deny government financial aid to students convicted of participating in riots.

A petition, signed by the 24 UNC and Duke professors, is being mailed to very language department chairman in the U. S. and Canada.

New Student Union Opens

Opening Of Several Facilities Delayed

Portions of the new Frank Porter Graham Student Union were opened to students Monday, Jan. 6. When the new building will become fully operational is still indefinite.

The old Graham Memorial Student Union building was closed at the beginning of the Christmas holidays and transfer of facilities began during the vacation.

The recently-completed Graham Student Union building stands east of the Student Stores building and faces the dirt parking lot that was once Emerson Field.

A large snack bar was to be located in the room directly to the right of the main entrance. However, its opening has been delayed indefinitely pending the results of an administration-sponsored study on food services.

Telephone installation is still incomplete, and problems involving the location of phones have been encountered.

Thus far four telephone lines have been installed. Two of them are located at the new information desk on the eastern side of the main floor. The other two lines have been installed in the office of the director of the Student Union and in the offices of the Daily Tar Heel.

Workers in the Student Union director's office and in the Daily Tar Heel office complained of poor telephone placement Monday.

The telephone in the office of the director of the Student Union does not reach the desk, and phone outlets in the main office of the Daily Tar Heel are located in the walls across the room from the desks. Telephone service in the DTH office has been interrupted pending relocation of outlets in the wall next to the desks.

A large auditorium is located on the main floor of the new union to the left of the information desk. The room will be used for recitals, conferences, and dances. Chairs have not yet been installed.

Seven of seventeen billiards tables have been installed in the billiard room which is located on the lower floor of the building. A bowling alley planned for the same floor is expected to be completed in about a month.

The new barber shop will open on February 1. The old barber shop in Graham Memorial will remain open until then.

The student government and Carolina Quarterly offices are located on the second floor of the new union building. They occupy the entire eastern wing. Another wing contains most of the eleven new meeting rooms. A large casual reading room is also planned for the same floor, to be located above the proposed snack bar.

greatly concerned. The essence of the union is the snack bar."

Henry added that the new building was designed with the snack bar in mind. "This would have been the most active area of the student union. We installed electric doors to handle the traffic. Now they aren't being used."

The snack bar, according to Henry, was going to offer a food service different from any other establishment on campus. He said the snack bar would not have a wide variety of items, but would have fast service.

"The sandwiches at the student union snack bar will be higher priced but of better quality than those at other campus facilities," said Henry. Branch said in a telephone interview that employees of the incomplete snack bar would be paid by the University Food Services.

In a study made of college campuses across the country, Henry found that the student union snack bar is the focal point of casual campus activity.

"The student union will become the gate to the campus. Visitors will get information on the university here. We expected the snack bar to be a main attraction," Henry said.

Cost: $5.6 Million

New Med Building Planned

Plans for a nine-story medical science laboratory and faculty office tower and a two-story cafeteria and student commons for the more than 2,500 students in health sciences have been approved by the University of North Carolina's trustees building committee.

The announcement was made today by Arthur N. Tuttle, Jr., director of planning for the University.

Estimated cost of the new building is $5.6 million.

The new building will be located in the area between North Carolina Memorial Hospital and the Basic Science Building now under construction and will contain more than 120,000 square feet of floor space.

Of this total, almost 80,000 square feet will be devoted to faculty offices and laboratories for the basic science departments of the School of Medicine.

Some 20,000 square feet will be required for the student commons and dining facilities.

Another 20,000 square feet has been allocated for the office of the North Carolina Medical Examiner, a post created by the 1967 General Assembly. This office was intended to work in close cooperation with the Medical School's Department of Pathology.

Tuttle said the new building is part of an overall expansion program designed to permit major increases in the teaching, research and public services programs of the Division of Health Sciences.

Primary function of the new building is to provide additional office and laboratory space for members of the basic science faculty and to relieve deficiencies in the space available for student dining and activities, Tuttle said.

The Department of Pathology will move into the new building and will release space in MacNider Hall for the expansion of other basic science departments.

The new building is designed to permit future expansion of all the activities it will house, Tuttle said. Four additional floors can be added to provide space for the basic science faculty. The student commons can be enlarged to provide book store facilities, conference rooms and additional dining space in the future, he added.

The limestone facing of the new building is intended to blend with the limestone trim and pre-cast concrete facing materials throughout the health sciences area and to be in harmony with the neo-Georgian design of North Carolina Memorial Hospital and other buildings in the Health sciences area, said Tuttle.

Coats, Tucker Dismissal

Group To Aid Ministers Formed

Department met in the Wesley Foundation, from which came the present committee, with Esser and Penick serving as co-chairmen.

Over the Christmas holidays, Esser and Penick met with Bishop Thomas Fraser, who issued the decision to remove the ministers. They talked for about four hours in the Bishop's Diocesan office in Raleigh.

Bishop Fraser issued his decision after receiving a report from a special commission, led by Rev. Martin Caldwell. The petitions protesting the dismissal of Coats and Tucker, containing about 1800 signatures, were mailed to Caldwell, who refused to accept them.

Rev. Harry Smith, now serving as the Chancellor's Special Assistant for Residence College Development, was among the persons interviewed by the commission. He was questioned on Nov. 14 by Rev.

Bartine Sherman of Charlotte and Mrs. Elanor Godfrey, both members of the investigating commission.

According to Smith, the discussion mostly centered around the structure of the Episcopal Church in the state and the future of ecumenical ministry. Coats and Tucker were mentioned in the discussion, both of whom Smith knew as an Episcopal minister.

After the announcement of the dismissal, Smith wrote Sherman, who replied that he had never formally presented his findings to the commission.

Rev. Caldwell had sent his report to Bishop Fraser before hearing Sherman's report.

Rev. Coats and Smith both say that the report of Caldwell's commission was not the entire basis of Bishop Fraser's decision.

Snack Bar Construction Suspended By Director

By EVIE STEVENSON
DTH Staff Writer

Work on the snack bar portion of the new student union was suspended in the late summer and will remain unfinished for an indefinite period.

The suspension was ordered by the University Auxiliary Enterprises. J.A. Branch, director of the Enterprises, said the suspension of progress was due to a report being made on the campus food services.

The report is expected to be completed by the end of this month. Branch said work on the snack bar might be continued after the report is given.

Howard Henry, director of the student union, said, "I am

Flu Epidemic May Hit Campus In Mid-Month

A new wave of the Hong Kong flu epidemic, if there is one, will hit the University during the second or third week of January, according to Dr. Paul Glezen of the UNC Infectious Diseases Lab.

Dr. Glezen emphasized, however, that a new outbreak was not certain. "It's a possibility," he said, "but it depends on what happened to the students during vacation. If they live in isolated areas, there's a good chance that there won't be another outbreak. It's really too soon to tell, though."

About thirty students were admitted to the infirmary with the Hong Kong flu before Christmas vacation, but this is probably a small percentage of the students who actually did have the flu, said Dr. Glezen.

Although it is too early to judge the effectiveness of the vaccine, there is evidence that it will be a major factor in keeping down the number of flu cases among those who received it.

"Out of 20 people in the infectious diseases lab who received the vaccine, only 2 people came down with the flu," reported Glezen.

The vaccine is only expected to be 75 to 80 per cent effective.