Volume 76, Number 111

By CARLA HABER

DTH Staff Writer

Dick Levy announced

Thursday afternoon that he will seek the Student Party

(SP) nomination for student

Levy is a former vice chairman of the University

Party and has been a legislator for both parties. He was associate editor of the Daily

Tar Heel and has been named the best debator at the state student legislature for the third

"be here next year if I win."

Although a senior, Levy will

Michael Zimmerman, former

chairman of the University

Party, will seek the SP vice presidential nomination as

"We're running becuase we think we're strong enough to provide the necessary

While favoring a strong president, Levy supports the notion that student government should be a

"The whole current movement on this campus is a healthy one," said Levy.

"Organizations such as the

BSM, SSOC and the Hayakawa

Society now occupy a central position in campus affairs with student government more or

"Student government was never strong," he explained. It has simply been strong enough to stand in the middle and keep anyone else from doing anything. I don't want to less on the sidelines.

return to that."

relatively weak organization.

body president.

consecutive year.

Levy's running mate.

leadership," stated Levy.

All Arts & Sciences students who expect to graduate in June, 1969 should apply for the degree in the College office, 206 South Building, before March 15.

Founded February 23, 1893

Cafeteria Opens Amid Pickets, Protests

Strikers, Administration Bargain

By WAYNE HURDER DTH Editor

Lenoir Hall opened Thursday morning without disturbances in the presence of over 40 state patrolmen equipped for riot duty.

Lenoir, which was ordered open Wednesday by Governor Bob Scott, was picketed from 4:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. by students, faculty and townspeople, numbering as many as 300 persons at times. State patrolmen and about 25 Chapel Hill police guarded the dining hall to keep entrances open for workers, delivery trucks and customers. Students who entered Lenoir throughout the day were greeted by a half-dozen police inside each door and by a Lenoir Hall employee handing out copies of a North Carolina statute prohibiting disruptions in the routine activities in public buildings. Negotiations between University Food Service workers and the University Administration were Thursday, as had scheduled.

The talks began at 2 p.m. and ended around 5:30.

Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks, vice-president of the University Food Service Workers Association, said at a meeting in Manning Hall afterwards, that they felt "the meeting accomplished nothing."

Mrs. Brooks, along with three other officers and representatives from each of the dining halls, met with two administrators, Joe Eagles, vice-chancellor for financial affairs, and Claiborne Jones, assistant to the chancellor.

Mrs. Brooks said that the administrators agreed to do something about three of their grievances." grievances:

show respect to the employee by referring to him or her as Wednesday. Mr. or Mrs.'

employment (a statement to necessary to keep the cafeteria this effect was made last Friday by Eagles) -"that the management

stop overworking present employees to keep from hiring

The employees said that more negotiations had been scheduled for 10 a.m. on Wednesday. change its authoritarian

Preston Dobbins, co-chairman of the Black Student Movement, said there rules; they always start with will be a continuation of picketing every day, at 4:30 a.m. to discourage workers from returning to work and to demonstrate to the might be served their meals administration the urgency of the matter.

He told the crowd to expect a long struggle. He said the negotiations were the first direct communications between the administration and the

The workers reported that Jones had said a $1.80 pay raise was unlikely because of the state legislature which had been reluctant to approve a $1.60 minimum wage. The workers said that Jones had told them the administration would strongly urge the state legislature to give the workers a 10 per cent pay raise by July.

Student Body President Ken Day and two other campus groups issued statements in protest of the governor's orders to keep Lenoir open and his sending in state troopers.

Day said the "action injected added tension and risk to a volatile situation that otherwise had potential for immediate improvement.

Faculty members Thursday afternoon issued a statement commending the administration for having closed Lenoir on Wednesday and deploring "the political interference which has created new tension on campus by forcing the administration to reopen Lenoir Hall."

The statement was drawn up at 11 a.m. Thursday. By 2:30 p.m. it had beensigned by 245 full-time and part-time faculty

The Graduate Association, in a meeting Wednesday night, voted to send a telegram to the governor appealing to him not to use military force against students and asking him to use his influence to "remedy just Scott expressed his desire to -"that the management keep Lenoir Hall open in a speech at Elon College on

"I have today instructed the -adhere to the provision to administration officials at the classify temporary employees University in Chapel Hill to as permanent after 90 days take whatever steps are lines open so that all students without disruption or unnecessary delays," Scott

The cafeteria had been closed on Wednesday following a couple of fist fights that took place Tuesday night when white sympathizers of the workers stalled the cafeteria

Reports early Wednesday said the Administration wanted to keep Lenoir closed pending negotiations with the workers. However, at 7:15 p.m.

Chancellor J. Carlyle Sitterson issued a statement saying that Lenoir Hall would be opened and that he would try to have a meeting with the workers on Thursday.

independent auditing team injury when he was struck by a would begin examining time truck going through the line at, cards and payroll records "of what some demonstrators said, all our Food Service employees was an excessive speed. Peay to see whether any payment is was taken to the infirmary, due any one of them for x-rayed, and later returned to overtime worked since Feb. 1, Manning Hall on crutches.

Wednesday night Scott outcome of the x-rays. ordered at least 50 state patrolmen to Chapel Hill and mobilized a National Guard use in case of trouble.

Approximately 40 state troopers came to Lenoir at 5:30 a.m. on Thursday to delivery trucks were able to get past the line of picketers.

One black student, Edward

He also announced that an Peay, a junior, suffered a leg There was no report of the Only about four black workers showed up for work, according to one demonstrator. unity in Durham for possible For the past few days the usual turnout of black workers at Lenoir has been 10 or 15; approximately 140 workers have remained off the job, insure that cafeteria employees closing Chase Cafeteria and the Monogram Club.

> The number of picketers (Continued on page 6)

N.C. Republicans Question School Disciplinary Policy

have been taken against other dining halls were closed. students participating in Tuesday night's disturbance at Wednesday on Sitterson's Lenoir Hall.

Harry Bagnal of Forsyth County said he had a meeting with a delegation of Chapel Hill student Wednesday evening who were "requesting that something be done so that they could pursue their education without fear of riots, disruption and harassment." House Minority Leader Charles Taylor signed the letter, also.

In a news release, the minority leaders said, "We feel that this disturbance demands response and if nothing if forthcoming from the governor's office or university necessary." A fight broke out Tuesday night in Lenoir Hall, the main student dining hall, as black

RALEIGH (UPI)-Repub- students and white people over the state have been lican legislative leaders sent a sympathizers slowed down the letter Thursday to University eating line in support of of North Carolina Chancellor striking cafeteria employes. Carlyle Sitterson demanding to The employes had been on know what disciplinary action strike for 13 days and three Lenoir Hall was closed orders, but reopened Thursday Senate Minority Leader on orders of Gov. Bob Scott. Riot-equipped police stood by as the dining hall reopened without incident.

Taylor, speaking at a hastily called news conference, denied there were political intentions in the letter which he and Bagnal signed. "We are trying to get the facts," he said. "It was strictly a letter of inquiry." Bagnal could not be reached for comment.

The letter dated March 6 (copies of which were widely distributed) said in part, "We would like to know that action has been taken to punish or officials, legislation will be suspend those students participating in the disturbance March 4."

> It further stated that "letters and telegrams from many received requesting that action be taken and the students be expelled and made responsible for compensation of damaged

"The very foundation of higher education in North Carolina is in jeopardy. Action must be taken against those who participated in this March disturbance and who participate in any future disturbances.

"Would you please notify us of what action you plan so we may determine if legislative action is necessary," the letter concluded.

Taylor, who said he did not have control over when the letter was sent out, denied that the Republicans were threatening Sitterson with legislation. "This was just a letter of inquiry," he insisted.

In response to a question, Taylor said he thought "two days was enough time" for Sitterson to act "with what we understand are a limited number of students involved."

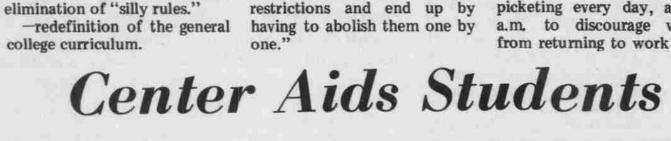

Taylor also denied that the letter indicated the republicans had a lack of confidence in Sitterson's administration of university affairs.

The Transylvania County legislator said if the Republicans contemplated introducing legislation, "we might be joined by others."

Asked about the timing of the letter when the campus was reported tense, Taylor said he did not think it would incite anyone. Asked why copies of the letter were distributed, the House minority leader said he had nothing to do with that.

Not all republicans were in agreement with the letter, Rep. James Johnson of Cabarrus told a reporter he did not feel bound by the letter. Rep. James Carson of Mecklenburg, along with Johnson, felt the letter should have been discussed in caucus before being sent.

Rep. James Holshouser of Watauga, the state Republican chairman, said he had talked with Taylor and Bagnal about the letter, but had not seen it

LEVY

campuses is these

mealy-mouthed liberal groups that are afraid to take a stand

Levy stated that he is

"The whole campus needs to running on a framework rather outlook," he said. "It doesn't occur to people to start with freedom and then establish than on specific issues.

"What's hurting

-withdrawal from the NSA

By EVIE STEVENSON DTH Staff Writer

Police guarded Lenoir Entrances through Sun. . . .

Support Of Student Party

pretty instrumental in helping to put the weakest people in office. I don't regret that, but

"Student government has become too weak. Formerly they were too strong. What is necessary is a strong elected student leader who can stand up for what the students really want-not the silent majority."

Levy describes his platform as "moderately left," His

-100% active support of

"If student government had actively supported the blacks,

as they did at Duke, this whole situation would have ended by

-active recruitment of

-total boycott of the Book

Exchange. Levy is opposed to Book Ex funds earmarked for athletic scholarships, Tom Shetley's "duplicity" and the women of at least sophomore women in men's rooms and self-limiting hours for all extended parietals such as

"larcenous" price system.

major planks include:

workers and janitors

blacks and rural people

that's not why I'm running this

Levy, Zimmerman Seek

DTH Staff Writer "The Guidance Center can

By EVIE STEVENSON

Levy was an unsuccessful help any student decide on his major in time candidate for the office of for student body president in 1968 pre-registration," said Dr. and lost his bid for editor of James W. Little, director of the the Daily Tar Heel in 1967 and Guidance and Testing Center.

take advantage of the Center's counseling service.

on anything."

The center, located in Peabody Hall, is designed to assist any student, without charge, in his decision on academic and occupational The guidance program takes confidential several weeks to complete. Dr. Little especially urged Therefore, Little asked tests to be taken from those "I've run before," Levy sophomores, who will be students to begin the program suggested by the counselor.

after the spring semester, to Pre-registration will be held from April 28 to May 2. The program begins with an initial interview with a vocational counselor. The counselor discusses the student's general background, goals, interests and plans. All information is considered The student then selects and through shower.

DTH Photo by Tom Schnabel

Heels Blunder, Slumber Into Semi-finals Over Tigers

By OWEN DAVIS DTH Sports Editor

CHARLOTTE-Carolina went into hibernation at the time of year everyone else is coming out.

It's March and spring is approaching, and also the end of the basketball season, specifically the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament when the best performances must be games of the season. They won anyway over Clemson, last in the ACC, 94-70.

That put UNC in the semi-finals tonight at 7 against the winner of the Wake-N.C. State game played late Thursday night.

Carolina slumbered and blundered. The Tar Heels made 29 turnovers, a season's high. UNC shot only 42.7 percent from the field.

There were missed layups, But instead the Tar Heels overthrown passes, everything turned in one of their poorest that goes into an off performance.

Charlie Scott missed his first nine shots, going 0-for-7 in the first half, and scored only 11 points, his low of the season. The one player who performed well was senior center Rusty Clark, who had been in a playing coma himself

Clark scored 19 first half points, finished with 22 and got 14 rebounds.

Bill Bunting perked up in the second half to also score 22 points, and he had 10 rebounds.

But the reason Carolina won wasn't because it was good, but because Clemson was worse.

The Tigers, the smallest team in the conference, were outrebounded 66-39. They shot 38.8 percent from the floor. They made 23 floor 45-33.

And Clemson shot only 56.2 percent from the foul line. The game started as it should have with Carolina the final 20 minutes. rolling up a quick 9-0 lead. But then the Tar Heels set the meant mistakes.

Clemson cut it to five at 15-10 and Carolina could never field. pull away by more than 12, which was its advantage at

At the half the score was The Heels dominated more in the second half, but only because Clemson shot poorly. Carolina made 18 turnovers in

Meanwhile Clemson guard Butch Zatezalo, the frequently. He finished with 28 points on 10 of 27 from the

In turn UNC's Jim Delany shot free throws. With 50 fouls called in the game, it appeared the contest would never end. Delany shot nine second half foul shots, made six of them, and scored a career high of 12 points. The game lasted almost two hours, and there were no officials' time-outs.

About the only thing the tempo of their play, and that conference's top scorer, shot Tar Heels did well was shoot foul shots, and they had plenty of opportunities. Carolina had 37 attempts and made 30 for 81.1 percent.

> Carolina Coach Dean Smith could only breath a sigh of relief after his team took its twenty-third win against three set-backs.

> "It's obvious we didn't play very well," he said, "and I think if you asked Clemson Coach Bobby Roberts, he would say they didn't well Rusty Clark came through for us. It looks as if he has come down here to have another great tournament.

"I was pleased by the way

"Charlie Scott didn't shoot well, but he did a lot of other things that helped us."

Smith said that Dick Grubar, who suffered a spill in the second half and may have injured his back, would be checked Friday to determine his condition.