

Begins One-Year Term

Klan Dragon Goes To Jail

GREENSBORO (UPI)—J. Robert Jones, grand dragon of the North Carolina Ku Klux Klan, walked hand-in-hand with his wife up to the Federal Building, stopped to hug her at the front door, and then walked in Monday to begin a one-year prison term for contempt of Congress.

Dozens of klansmen dressed in robes and hoods but no masks and Klan security guards in grey fatigue uniforms and helmets waited outside the building or in the lobby after Jones rode an elevator up to the third floor to surrender to U.S. Marshalls.

He was then taken to a jail in neighboring High Point where Eldon G. Crews, chief deputy U. S. Marshall, said the Granite Quarry resident would remain until the Federal Bureau of Prisons assigned him to a federal penitentiary.

The klansmen and security guards had planned to form an "honor guard" along the front steps of the building for Jones when he came out, but federal agents took him out a side door and they left town unnoticed by the klansmen.

Jones was the second Klan leader to begin serving a one-year term for refusing to turn over Klan records to the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1966.

Robert Shelton of Tuscaloosa, Ala., began serving his term at the federal minimum security facility at Texarkana, Tex., earlier this year. Robert Scoggin of Spartanburg, S.C., grand Dragon of the South Carolina Klan, faces the same sentence but has not yet begun his term.

"We're all political prisoners," said Jones before entering the Federal Building. He had been ordered Friday to surrender to the U.S. marshalls Monday.

"I don't know what it's going to be like. I've never been in jail before," said Jones, who was dressed in a grey business suit. "There's no way you can get ready for that, I guess."

Jones said about 120 klansmen and Klan security guards had accompanied him in a caravan of cars and a chartered bus from Salisbury to the Federal Building where he surrendered to marshalls at 9:15 a.m.

Someone shouted at him: "Did you get a two-way bus ticket?"

"Hell, no, I'm not going but one way," he replied.

His wife, Sybil, waved off newsmen's questions and told them, "I have nothing to say."

Authorities said Jones will be eligible for parole after serving one third of his sentence, which means he could be paroled in four months.

He and the other klansmen had refused to turn over the Klan records and membership lists during an investigation of the organization by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Calvin Craig, who was grand dragon of the Georgia Klan at the time, also refused to turn over records. But he later quit the Klan and joined an anti-poverty agency. He was fined $1,000 rather than sentenced to prison.

Hospital Workers Arrested Over Picket Line Dispute

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI)—Forty-four black hospital workers marched willingly into police vans Monday in a drive to unionize the state Medical College Hospital, and a circuit judge moved to bring the Hospital Workers Union up for contempt action.

The arrests for violation of an injunction governing the size of the picket line brought the total to more than 100 in the five days since an estimated 200 non-professional workers walked off their jobs.

The workers, bearing picket signs ranging from a hand-lettered placard which said, "Dr. King died for us" to a picture of a policeman which said "Even rats can scare women," were taken into custody for violating an injunction limiting the picket line to 10 members.

Judge Clarence Singletary meanwhile signed an order to require the union to show cause at an April 3 hearing why it should not be held in contempt of his injunction.

The workers, almost entirely Negroes, seek representation by the National Hospital and Nursing Home Workers Union, and plan to take their drive to other Charleston hospitals.

The University has flatly refused to talk to union leaders, citing an opinion by Atty. Gen. Dan McLeod that as a state institution it has no authority to negotiate with or recognize a union.

"We don't plan to talk to anyone who represents a union," said William Huff, vice president for development. "We will talk to any of our employees."

It was learned that the hospital had replaced about 35 of the workers and was apparently seeking to fill more vacancies.

Huff said the hospital has up to about 800 non-professional workers in the kitchens, cleanup details, as orderlies and in other jobs. The work stoppage has led the hospital to turn away "elective" cases that can wait, and currently has about 350 bedpatients compared to an average of about 400.

Huff defended the hospital's wage scale for help, which starts at $1.35 per hour for non-professionals and goes to $1.44 after three months. He said the minimum was five cents above the federal minimum wage for hospitals, and the salary was escalating to $1.60 under federal guidelines.

Candidates Seek 75 Offices Today

Approximately 75 students are running for the Student Legislature.

Elections Board Chairman Minor Mickel announced polling places Monday afternoon. All dormitory residents will vote in their own dorms with the exception of Alexander residents, who will vote in Lewis, and Winston residents, who will vote in Connor.

Polling places will also be set up in the law school for law students, in the Scuttlebutt for men residing in district three and in Y-Court for men in districts one, three and four and for off-campus and sorority women.

She also said students are still badly needed to count ballots. The counting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in rooms 207 and 209 of the Student Union and will continue until the counting is finished.

The results of the student body presidential and vice presidential elections will be announced late tonight or early Wednesday morning, and a running tally will be kept in the Student Union snack bar.

Any runoffs will be held next Tuesday.

Results of other elections may not be announced for a few days.

Miss Mickel said all poll tenders must remain at their posts until they are relieved, and the last pole tender of the day must stay until all Elections Board members pick up the ballot box.

University Committee Organizes

Tables will be placed in Y-Court today and Wednesday for students who wish to sign up for discussion groups in the Free University Committee, a spokesman for the group announced Monday.

The committees were started just before the workers' strike but were discontinued during the course of the strike.

"What we're doing now," the spokesman said, "is reorganizing. We're looking for people who see that there are problems and who want to discuss these problems."

The committee was started to discuss student activism and the courses it can take and to do research on the topic.

Each group will be composed of 10 to 12 members and will meet at least once a week.

Trespass Trial Is Postponed

FAYETTEVILLE—The appeal trial of three local SSOIC members for trespassing on a federal military reservation has been postponed so the prosecution may have time to prepare its case.

Eastern Federal District Judge John Larkins Monday granted the U.S. prosecuting attorney at least 10 days to file a counterbrief, or answer, to a brief of the case filed by attorneys for Andy Rose, Charles Mann and Scott Bradley.

They are appealing a conviction of last November for handing out anti-war literature at the Fort Bragg military base here.

A fourth person, DTH staff reporter Mike Cozza, was also convicted on the same charge but has not appealed. His fine was $50.

Fifteen persons were arrested in the incident, but due to lack of evidence only four were convicted.

The American Civil Liberties Union, including Dale Whitman of the UNC Law School, is representing the three SSOIC defendants. They presented a 30-page brief to the court Monday.

DOUBLE-BREASTED IN PERSPECTIVE

The way we see it, the new enthusiasm for double-breasted suits must be channeled. Into correct natural shoulder styling, of course, with a lean, long look to the jacket. Into richer new fabrics, such as the one we picture. And into our premises, to be sure, to insure a double-breasted fit that keeps things in perspective.
