

Webster Hopes To Be 'Jimmy On The Spot'

By RICK BREWER
Special to DTH

Jim Webster is on the spot and he knows it.

Webster will be one of the key men on the Carolina defensive unit which must face what may be the most balanced offense in the Atlantic Coast Conference Saturday night, when the Tar Heels play at the University of South Carolina.

Linebacker Webster, one of seven sophomores who started defensively in last week's opener against N.C. State, was praised by newsmen, coaches, and opposing players for his fine play against the Wolfpack.

After State won the game 10-3, Wolfpack quarterback Darrell Moody said, "Carolina's defense was great and that number 44 was all over the field."

That is Webster's number and he, along with guard Bill Richardson and back Dave Jackson, spearheaded the UNC defense which at times played brilliantly against State.

However, Webster is expecting a more difficult time this week. "State does not pass very much anymore," said Webster, "and we were pretty sure they would not throw with the weather as bad as it was Saturday. The rain was so bad they attempted only three passes."

"Therefore I was anticipating a run on every play and was able to make a few tackles which I might not have been in on normally."

"But this week it will be impossible to anticipate a play in advance. South Carolina has both a fine passing attack and a good ground game. They will throw from anywhere on the field and can run inside with Warren Muir and outside with Rudy Holloman."

Webster, a 194-pounder from Winston-Salem, N.C., is not as big as most linebackers. However, he makes up for his lack of size with speed, quickness, and strength.

He came to Carolina from Parkland High School as a defensive halfback and played that position as a freshman. However, he was shifted to linebacker in spring practice last year.

Apparently Webster made the switch very quickly for he played excellently in the Blue-White game and was voted the game's best defensive player.

"At first I didn't know if I'd like it, but now I think it's great," says Webster. "At linebacker you're closer to the action and get to hit more. And that's what it's all about:

hitting people. "There isn't as much glory playing defense as offense, but I'd rather hit somebody than get hit."

Despite the rain, 32,000 fans saw the State-Carolina game Saturday and that presented an added problem to Webster.

"Before the game I was scared to death. I'd never played before a really big crowd before. However, the rain actually helped my nervousness. When I looked up in the stands, I couldn't see the people, just umbrellas."

Carolina coach Bill Dooley feels Webster has a great future ahead of him at Carolina. "Jim is a good football player now, but he's going to get better," says Dooley. "He made some mistakes against State, but also made some good plays. I think he is going to be one of our best defensive players before the season is over."

By ART CHANSKY
DTH Sports Editor

All of the first week publicity about South Carolina's offensive keg of dynamite has placed the Gamecock defensive unit in the shadows.

But Tar Heel Coach Bill Dooley is well aware that USC has eight veterans and three very talented sophomores on a defense that he calls "nearly as big as North Carolina State's." South Carolina gave up 20 points and 306 yards to Duke this past weekend, but the Gamecocks were facing one of the nation's most formidable passers in Leo Hart.

USC employs a variation of the 5-2 defense which Coach Paul Dietzel calls the "rover." It simply means that one of the Gamecock linebackers, roverman Bo Davies, lines up where the opposing offense is strongest. In UNC's case, Davies will always go to wingback Bucky Perry's side, whether it be right or left.

South Carolina's five defensive interior linemen have earned a total of eight varsity letters, and they present a tough wall for the Tar Heels to penetrate.

USC senior ends Lynn Hodge and Dave Lucas are two experienced defenders and will pose a real challenge to the Tar Heel blockers that must kick them out. Hodge is a bulky 6-4, 245, while Lucas is "skinnier" at 6-5, 194.

Junior tackles Rusty Ganas and Jimmy Poston have one year behind them but one to go, so they are the "weakest" of the Gamecock linemen. But Ganas is a skyscraping 6-6, 237, and Poston is not much smaller at 6-4, 245. Coach Dooley had a definite point.

Middle guard Don Buckner is the "pee-wee" of the crop, but the converted offensive guard is a two-year letterman and has plenty of football savvy. At 5-11, 195, though, Buckner may be easier game for Tar Heel center Bob Hanna than was State's George Smith. The linebackers are small, but quick in juniors Al Usher and Benny Padgett. Both are 5-11 and around 200 pounds. The roverman is the highly-touted Davies, a sophomore who is a thin 5-11, 170.

Duke's Hart had a field night against the Gamecock secondary, and the two sophomores back there may explain why. Preseason reserves Dick Harris and Jim Nash are the left halfback and safety, respectively, who were called into duty when injuries depleted the USC backfield. Nash saw his first action last week when veteran Terry Hellams chipped a bone in his leg.

Senior halfback Pat Watson is the stabilizing force in the Gamecock secondary. Watson is the South Carolina defensive leader who will give Tar Heel receivers Blanchard, Lanier, Alvis and Perry the most difficulty.

Battle Of Two Carolinas Tops ACC Week

By RUSTY CARTER

As an air of optimism rises for the second straight week in Chapel Hill, the center of attention of the Atlantic Coast Conference this weekend will be in Columbia.

The Tar Heels, by fortune of their opening schedule with the pre-season conference picks, will again be playing the "crucial" ACC match. They meet the South Carolina Gamecocks, who are now the decided favorites to win the conference and Saturday's bout.

But many Carolina fans, especially football players, foresee an upset that is necessary if the Heels are to keep their high morale and hopes of a winning season. A win for the Heels has not been predicted but a more than tough battle is seen developing at Carolina Stadium.

Carolina's young team put up a stubborn fight before bowing to N.C. State 10-3 in their opener. The Heels will be gunning for revenge since they well remember what happened one year ago. In that one, South Carolina scored 29 points in the final period to cop a 32-27 victory.

Saturday will mark the 43rd meeting of the two Carolinas and the Heels lead in the series 29-9-4, but the Cocks have won the last two.

USC's quarterback Tommy Suggs, who destroyed the Carolina lead last year, was up to his usual tricks last week as he engineered the Gamecocks to a 27-20 win over Duke. Suggs scored a 48 yard touchdown on a fourth-and two situation, and kept the Duke defense baffled, to earn the ACC "Back of the Week" honors.

Two conference tests, in addition to the UNC-USC clash, and a pair of non-league "backbreakers" highlight the second full week of activity.

N.C. State gets a chance to notch its second league win in a game against Maryland, where Head Terp Coach Roy Lester is making his debut before the home fans. The Pack still has strong aspirations for a title despite their opening loss to Wake Forest.

Two State players, middle guard George Smith and back Gary Yount were selected by the ACC Sports Writers Association as the defensive standouts of last week's action. The two were dominant in the muddy State victory.

Maryland has not won over the Wolfpack since 1962 and it is doubtful they will win in 1969. State has to win or else be counted out of the ACC race and it is evident they have the manpower to do so.

Duke's Leo Hart, who put on a fantastic second half performance at South Carolina by completing 15-22 passes, will give the veteran Virginia defense a big test. The Blue Devils' hopes will be riding on Hart's arm.

Virginia sophomore fullback Gary Helman had a good day for the Cavaliers in his first varsity start against Clemson, scoring 14 of the 14 points and gaining 40 yards in 12 carries.

Both Clemson and Wake Forest face major non-league tests in trying to get the ACC in the win column against outside foes. It has been a long time since the Tigers have beaten an SEC foe and Georgia is the favorite to win the crown this year.

Clemson's guard Grady

Burgner, who was selected in the first pole a year ago, was voted "ACC Offensive Lineman of the Week," for his performance against Virginia.

Wake suffered a sound thrashing in the league's first outing against the SEC when it bowed to Auburn 57-0 last week. The Deacons will be up against another strong opponent when it faces Virginia Tech, a 17-13 loser to Alabama.

Saturday's action will be especially critical for the league opponents and Carolina's second test may prove the most decisive. It will either give them the optimism of beating the top-ranked team or the disillusionment of losing two conference games off the top of their schedule.

A loss could prove injurious to the remainder of the schedule but a win could equally make the season.

Sock The 'Cocks Friday

A "Sock The 'Cocks" Rally and March Friday night will send the Tar Heels off to play their important game against South Carolina at Columbia. The march will begin at Y-Court at 6:45 p.m. and proceed down Cameron Ave. past the Union and Bell Tower to the Rams Head Parking Lot where a pep rally at 7:15 will send the team buses off to Raleigh-Durham Airport. A motorcade will leave, following the buses at 7:30, for the Airport to see the Heels off on their 8 p.m. flight. All students are invited to join the march, rally and motorcade.

Cav Wilkes Quits UVA Hoop Team

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA. (UPI)—University of Virginia Basketball Coach Bill Gibson's hopes for an improved season were shaken Tuesday by the resignation of Mike Wilkes, last year's high scorer.

"Prior to losing Mike, I thought we were going to be as good or better than we were last year," Gibson told UPI. "Now we'll just have to wait and see our boys in action before deciding how we will work."

Wilkes, a 6-2, 200-pound forward from Dallas, Pa., said he quit the team to handle an accelerated scholastic schedule. He plans to graduate in January, 1970, and begin graduate school at another university in February.

The resignation leaves Gibson with only four lettermen returning—Chip Case, Bill Fulton, Bill Gerry and Kevin Kennelly. They will be aided by a group of inexperienced juniors and sophomores.

Harriers To Begin Season On Monday

Carolina's cross country team will have three weeks of hard training behind it when the Tar Heels open their 1969 schedule here next Monday against South Carolina.

Coach Joe Hilton's squad came back to school early and in good shape, he reported, and have worked hard from that point to where now only a couple of sore knees hamper the team. Otherwise, a blend of youth and experience gives Hilton cause for optimism.

Lettermen Alex Covington, Charles Markman, Earl Owens and Larry Widgeon are joined by four promising freshmen to lend a strong look to the Tar Heel harriers.

The first year runners include David Collins, Patrick Grady, Bill Harwood and Jim Lamb, all of whom Hilton expects to help the team this year.
