

New Left Counters 'America Day'

'It's the duty of the party to speak to the needs of the people.'

Service," processions of flags, a "festival of American folk life," military bands, and a fireworks show.

The activities planned by the New Left are unofficial and largely unannounced. Most events, according to observers, will likely be spontaneous.

Hollywood will be represented by singers Kate Smith, who will lead the crowd in "God Bless America," B.J. Thomas, and comedienne Theresa Graves.

A counter-salute entertainment schedule has been organized, featuring rock bands and notables of the New Left. Among the musicians performing will be

Sly and the Family Stone, and Country Joe and the Fish, both of which canceled out of the Atlanta Pop Festival to play at the "smoke-in."

Rennie Davis and the "Committee to Prevent a July 4th Fist Fight" reportedly have petitioned the "Honor America

Day" committee for youth and black representation on the platform. The Davis group has asked that New Left representatives include Abbie Hoffman, Allen Ginsberg, and Dick Gregory as co-masters of ceremony with Hope.

At a Monday news conference, Hope said that the New Left "will be welcome if they have some entertainers they want to present. We'll be happy to give them an audition. But if it's political, forget it."

Both camps have predicted large turnouts for their respective events. Hope said he expects 400,000 to attend "Honor America" activities at the Lincoln Memorial and Washington Monument.

Abbie Hoffman, when refused admittance to a Tricia Nixon party at the White House two months ago, predicted, "We'll be back July 4th with 100,000 people." No other New Left crowd estimates are available.

Foushee Sees Hope For 'System'

"You won't always win, but you have to stick with it. The political process demands long-range goals. Some of the results of our efforts may not be seen in North Carolina for 20 years.

For Foushee, the challenge to youth and reformers begins at home. "Not enough of us used the ballot in the recent Orange County elections. Only 25 per cent of those registered went to the polls, and several good candidates lost as a result. So I don't want to hear any complaints about county government from people who didn't vote. We've got to exercise our ballot power at all levels."

The experience of McCarthy's aborted "Magical Mystery Tour" two years ago was, for Foushee, an instruction in practical political power.

"I believe, then as now, that the system is open and responsive enough to produce changes and needed reforms," he opined.

"The challenge to youth, then, is one of adaptability and resiliency—working to produce changes and accepting defeats."

Foushee believes that young people need reassurance for their wavering respect for "the system"—but that most of them still look to the institutions.

"In the past two years I've seen an encouraging trend of regular, faithful, and active participation in politics by young people, blacks, and liberal thinkers.

"I suspect Sen. Jordan's vote against the Byrd amendment resulted largely from the heavy outpouring from the N.C. Fourth District—the "Triangle area." No person in elected office ever ignores a significant expression of opinion. The young must utilize their new advantages. If they do, beginning at the precinct level, the older, status quo will have to listen."
