

Carolina Ruggers Prepare For Opener Against Davidson

Oppose Davidson

Ruggers Open Season

For the fifth year running students at UNC will be able to view one of the world's most interesting sports spectacles. That of a rugby match.

UNC is scheduled to open their fall season Saturday at 2:00 p.m. against Davidson.

Carolina's rugby club is attempting to improve on a 10-2 showing last spring as well as capture the entirety of the Carling Cup, indicative of the rugby championship of the South.

They now possess only half right to it, sharing with the Washington, D.C. club.

The outlook for the coming season is quite bright. Carolina has lost only 2 out of last year's starting seven backs, and the scrum has picked up new players of outstanding size and ability. UNC is, to put it briefly, golden.

Davidson is not expected to be the finest opponent UNC is to face this fall, but they are "solid, and big" in the words of Colin Jeffcoat, team captain.

Carolina will counter any threat with a new combination in the half-backs. George Butler joins veteran Ben Porter, in the scrum, and fly-half pair. The two play effectively despite averaging only 150 pounds between the two of them.

Weight will be no problem as the scrum will feature Lynch Christian at 210 and Roy Mitchell at 205. John Parsons is scheduled to start his first game at hooker, a position which in the past had been a question mark.

The questions are no longer asked, however, as Parsons has proved to be a hard running, hard hitting forward, equal to the task.

After being out for a year in the Army reserve, Carolina's backfield welcomes back Tommy Clay, who was one of the club's strongest runners. He will be entrusted with carrying the ball through the opposition from his outside center position.

The games this year will be played on Ehringhaus field, and the traditional Rugby party, open to all, will be held afterward.

Motor Cross Racing Set

Motor cross racing comes to the Chapel Hill area with the opening of Chapel Hill Downs Sunday.

The popular spectator sport which Steve McQueen helped publicize makes its debut in central North Carolina when an expected 40 to 50 entries compete for a $250 purse Sunday.

The track, approximately eight-tenths of a mile in length, is located about eight miles west of Chapel Hill off Highway 54 on Orange Grove Road.

The closed track takes advantage of the natural terrain, including hills and dips, and is entirely visible from the observation hill.

All local entries are welcome, according to the promoter, with competition in classes including 100, 200 and 250 c.c. as well as an open division.

Racing gets underway at 1 p.m. with gates open at 10 a.m. A picnic area and concessions stand will be in service.

Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children. A mini-bike derby for children will be held as well as powder-puff racing for women riders.

WHAT IS EAT AT JOE'S?
 Well, it's not a class joint. On the other hand, it's not a greasy spoon, either. Hopefully you won't find a one in the place. The food is good. And cheap. And fast. And nearby.
