

Carolina Dominates ACC Team Statistics

Carolina continues to dominate the team statistics in the Atlantic Coast Conference, according to latest figures released by the league's service bureau.

The Tar Heels, averaging 442.7 total yards per game in rolling to three consecutive victories, are out front in six of the 10 team categories.

In addition to total offense, they also lead in total defense, rushing, rushing defense, scoring and scoring offense.

They rank third in three other categories and are sixth in pass offense.

Duke, which leads in pass offense with a 238-yard average, ranks second to UNC in total offense. Coach Bill Dooley's club has amassed 1,328 yards while Duke has gained 1,198.

Duke also leads in punting and punt returns while South Carolina is the leader in pass defense.

In rushing, Carolina has a big lead over second-place South Carolina. With powerful Don McCauley doing most of the work, the Tar Heels have rushed for 955 yards in 205 plays for a game average of 318.3 and a play average of 4.7.

South Carolina has gained 557 yards on the ground for a 185.7 average. Duke is third in rushing and Clemson fourth.

In defense against the rush, the Tar Heels have limited their three foes to a net of 248 yards for an 82.7 game average. Duke ranks second with a 118 average.

In total defense Carolina is the front runner with a 243.3 game average with USC second at 257.7.

South Carolina is second at 23.3 and Clemson third at 17.0.

UNC, which won scoring honors last year with an average of 20 points per game, is now leading with a 30.7 average, thanks to a 53-point outburst against Maryland.

The Tar Heels have given up 30 points for a 10-point average to lead in scoring defense while South Carolina is second at 12.3 and Duke third at 13.3.

Family Is True Carolina Blue

UNC News Bureau

Attending UNC is a tradition for many Tar Heel families, but most do not have four sons and daughters enrolled here at the same time.

The Lamar Youngs, Sr. of Shelby are an exception. This year, four of the Young's children-Bryan, Mike, Eugene and Judie-are all on the Chapel Hill campus.

The situation is exceptional for still another reason; the students earned nearly all the money for their room, board, tuition and clothes.

As expected, their parents are proud. "We never could send all these children to school if they didn't work," Mrs. Young said. "We are proud they are willing to work and that they are so self sufficient."

Bryan Young, now a first year medical student, graduated here in 1970 with a degree in chemistry. Mike is a senior chemistry major and twins Judie and Gene are freshmen.

All say working has made them more appreciative of the opportunity to attend school and has helped them in many other ways. "It gives you a sense of responsibility," said Judie. Echoing the sentiments of her brothers, she added: "It sure helps on the financial side."

Since their early teens, the Youngs have worked in their father's furniture store and have performed various maintenance jobs for their father's rental property. Last summer, Judie worked for grandfather's insurance agency in Forest City and Bryan managed the Elks Club pool in Shelby. Mike and Gene worked in the furniture store.

"I wish I had had a job where I could have helped others," Mike observed. "But, I had to consider the money."

Both older boys are pleased with their years at UNC.

"If you want an education, you can get a top notch education here," said Bryan, a member of Phi Beta Kappa. "But it's not a high pressure school. It puts you on your own, which I think is good. American youth tend to be too sheltered."

Mike likes the idea of attending a large university. "You're confronted with so many ideas, thoughts. I'm glad I've had the chance to be exposed to all of this. I'm a better person."

Bryan considered pursuing a Ph. D. in chemistry, then decided on medicine. "I followed the doctors around at home and became familiar with their daily schedules. That was a big factor in my decision," he said. He's still interested in medical research.

Mike also hopes to attend medical school here. "I've always wanted to do this, even before Bryan," he said. "It combines my interest in science and in helping others."

As freshmen, Judie and Eugene find the campus friendlier than they expected. Also, both enjoy "being on your own."

"There's a lot of studying," said Gene. "But I like it. I like the chance to meet new people." Gene may be the third member of his family to major in chemistry.

Judie's also impressed with the friendliness of the campus. "I was expecting everyone to be cold and impersonal, to not care about me. But I've found everyone friendly and helpful."

The four Youngs share many interests-water sports, snow skiing, music and tennis. All were members of the Shelby swimming team. Judie is a dancer and has taught ballet.

With their busy schedules, the four Youngs don't spend too much time together on campus. Bryan and Mike share an apartment and Judie and Eugene are living in Granville Towers. So there is always a brother or sister close by.
