Heels Rally; Beat Vandy For Fourth Straight Win

by Chris Cobbs
Sports Editor

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Carolina did not exactly establish itself as a team of destiny here Saturday night, but it did make one thing perfectly clear.

In staging a stirring fourth quarter rally that produced a 10-7 victory over Vanderbilt, UNC demonstrated a remarkable ability to atone for its own mistakes.

The Tar Heels scored a touchdown and a field goal in the final period after failing seriously four times in the previous three quarters.

Carolina penetrated to the Commodore one, six, seven and 34 in the game's initial three periods, only to be stopped by fumbles and interceptions.

While quarterback Johnny Swofford and wingback Lewis Jolley had their difficulties hanging on to the football prior to the final stanza, they performed with both precision and sure hands in the concluding 15 minutes.

Carolina found itself trailing 7-0 as the fourth period began.

The Tar Heels got possession at their five yard line early in the period after a carefully placed Vanderbilt punt.

Swofford then commenced a 95 yard drive that required 13 plays and gave UNC a tie with 10:26 showing on the score board.

His pass to Jolley with the Tar Heels at the Vandy 16 was a fourth down gamble that the fleet junior wingback turned into the tying score by outracing the defensive secondary.

The Tar Heels drove 23 yards for the decisive field goal, which Ken Craven booted to the Vandy seven with 5:39 remaining.

Les Whitehome's 19 yard punt return had given the Tar Heels possession at the Commodore 30, from where they advanced into position for Craven's kick in seven plays.

Vanderbilt resorted to the obvious strategy of taking to the air in the remaining five minutes, let the UNC line rush and hard hitting secondary were equal to the demanding occasion.

Carolina had not been impressive prior to the exciting fourth period.

In the first quarter, Vanderbilt drove to the UNC ten but John Miller, starting in place of injured quarterback Watson Brown, fumbled there and Judge Mattocks recovered.

It was one of numerous important defensive plays which helped stymie Vanderbilt as the Tar Heel offensive sputtered near the goal line.

UNC was camped at the commodore 12 as the first period ended, following a 63 yard drive in five plays. The Tar Heels made it to the goal line, but an illegal motion penalty sent them back to the five.

Swofford dropped the ball as he rolled to his left three plays later and Vanderbilt gained possession when tackle John Robinson fell on the pigskin.

Vandy got rolling a few minutes later as Miller passed to fullback Bill Young on back-to-back plays that netted 40 yards.

The Commodores scored with 5:53 left in the half when Miller threw to giant end Karl Weiss for a 23 yard touchdown.

The Tar Heels survived three frustrating efforts in the third quarter before its final period rally that preserved their undefeated record.

UNC is now 4-0 and faces South Carolina in Kenan Stadium this week.

Fraternity Having Trouble Reaching Business Majors

Alpha Kappa Psi, the only professional business fraternity on campus, is having difficulty contacting prospective rushees.

"We've run into a problem this fall concerning rush," said Andy Damiano, president of AK Psi. "In the past, 90 per cent of our members came from a list of names supplied to us by the School of Business of B.A. and economics majors."

"This year, however, Carroll Hall has not supplied this list. Drop-add was too long and rush is starting too early for the list to be possible," he explained.

The 32 brothers are concerned that business and economics majors should know that there is a professional business fraternity on campus.

"Many of our members are not business and economics majors," add George Mills, rush chairman. "Any major usually comes in contact with some kind of business, such as in government. So we welcome all majors to attend fall rush."

Rush for all campus fraternities begins Monday and runs through Wednesday.

"We have a full regular schedule planned for the fall," said Damiano. "This includes guest speakers from large corporations as well as social activities, such as football weekends with combos."

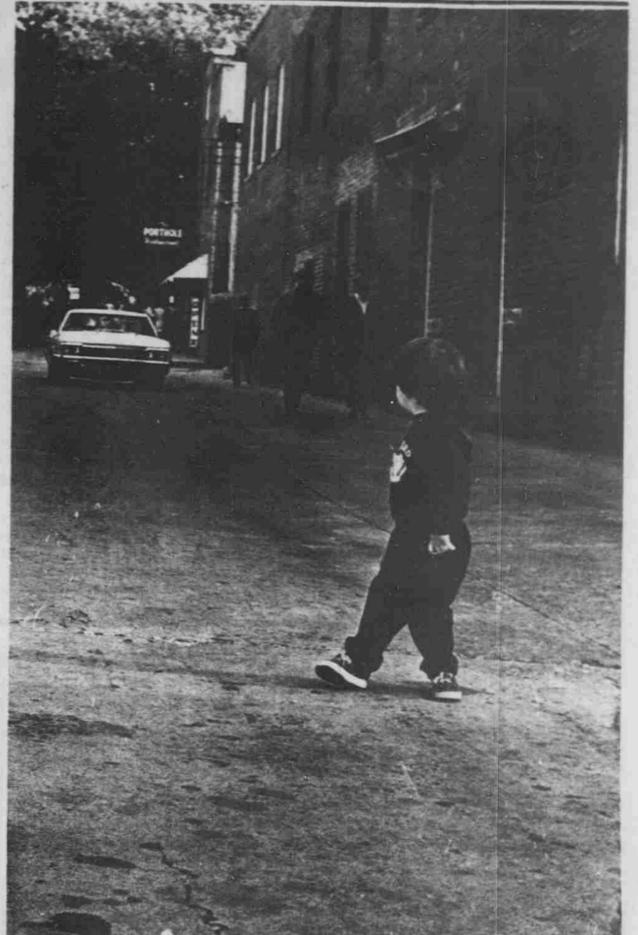

Last year Alpha Kappa Psi tied with two other fraternities for first place in Inter Fraternity Council general competition. It won two first place trophies from the Campus Chest auction and another by winning the Ugly Man on Campus contest in the small house division.

AK Psi is in the process of getting a new house. "We would like to say in the area of our present house at 214 E. Rosemary St.," said Damiano. Plans should be finalized within one year.

The Alpha Tau chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi has served the UNC campus for 45 years.

Fraternity Rush To Begin Monday

by Jessica Hanchar
Staff Writer

Fall fraternity formal rush will be held Monday through Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m. each night.

Sorority formal rush ended Friday afternoon. Almost 180 coeds received bids, which were distributed to the girls in their individual rooms by their rush counselors.

Any sophomore, junior or senior male with a 2.0 QPA is eligible to participate in fraternity rush.

"We expect about 250 men to participate in rush," said Todd Llewellyn, Inter Fraternity Council rush chairman.

Approximately 400 girls participated in sorority rush, which lasted ten days. This figure includes girls who dropped out during rush.

"Fifty percent is about normal," said Nancy Nyrop, Panhellenic rush chairman. "Most houses did extremely well from the number standpoint."

Fraternity rushees may visit any house they wish during rush hours. However, man who signed preference cards are assured of receiving invitations from those houses.

Each fraternity house eliminates rushees on their own bases. "Ax sessions" will be held each night after rush.

Bid cards will be collected Wednesday night at the Student Union. The cards will be distributed that night to individual rushees.

Sorority rush followed a largely unstructured program, which included open houses and general entertainment.

"We tried several new systems for rush," said Miss Nyrop. "We did away with the 'tea' system and made it more casual, more in tune with the times."

"This system was received very well by the rushees," she added. "From that standpoint, rush was very effective."

Miss Nyrop encouraged girls who for various reasons did not receive bids to sign up Monday for open-bidding with Miss Julie Jones, assistant dean of women, in O1 Steele.

Most houses still have places for girls, according to Miss Nyrop.

According to Inter Fraternity Council rules, fraternity houses may rush upperclass men informally throughout the semester.
