Staff Writer

Thirty UNC students have been chosen to visit Toronto, Canada, in the 1970-71 Toronto Exchange program.

The participants were chosen from 150 applicants by a committee of former exchange students after a series of interviews last week.

Those chosen were: Elinor Allcott, Linda Anderson, Mary Elizabeth Ayers, Peggy Baggett, Mike Barefoot, Jinny Bartel, Celia Benton, Edith Davis, Bill Debuys, Todd Engstrom, Diane Gooch, Malcolm Groome, George Hopkins, Vincent Kapp, Dottie Lambert, Jeff Hilliker, Andy Hunter, Melinda

Lawrence, Cecil Miller, Elliot Moffitt, Cathy Myers, Britt Nicholson, Susan Oldham, Pam Pittard, Carolyn Ross, Al Smith, Charles Sneed, Chris Vaillancourt, Hank Van Hoy and John Westall.

Co-chairmen of the program, Judy Hippler and Bill Sowers, said diversity, to represent the multi-faceted nature of the University, was the primary criterion in the selections.

They also urged those applicants who were not chosen for the exchange to participate in as many of the activities on the campus when the 30 students from University of Toronto are here Nov. 19-22.

A reception for those not selected for the exchange is planned.

Miss Hippler said the exchange welcomes any suggestions on program format, topics, or speakers for the UNC portion for the exchange from those who were not chosen.

"We urge those applicants who were not accepted and who will be students next year to apply again, keeping in mind that one's former application will definitely be a positive factor in your favor," Sowers said.

The 30 UNC students chosen will visit in Toronto during semester break to be reunited with their counterparts there who had come to Chapel Hill.

"We sincerely regret there are not funds to send every applicant to Toronto, but it is our financial reality that only 30 may be selected," Miss Hippler said.

Beer Contest

The fifth annual fraternity "beer-chugging" contest will be held Friday at 3 p.m. at Phi Delta Theta house.

Sixteen fraternity teams have signed up to compete. Two teams will compete at one time in a single elimination process. Each member will drink one beer.

For the final round, each fraternity member will drink two beers.

Kappa Alpha fraternity won the contest last year.

"Last year almost 500 people watched the contest," said Tom Wood, Phi Delta Theta member.

Phi Delta Theta is located at 304 S. Columbia Street.

Dr. Joe Ludlow of Dow Chemical Company will discuss "Herbicides in The Environment" at a seminar today at 11 a.m. in Room 201, Coker Hall. Interested persons are invited.

UNC's 149 James M. Johnston Scholars will be honored at a banquet Friday at the Carolina Inn.

Johnston Scholars from the UNC campuses in Chapel Hill, Greensboro and N.C. State will attend the banquet.

The first class of James M. Johnston Scholars entered the University this fall. The students were selected in the spring during the Distinguished Scholars Weekend of the UNC Faculty Committee on Scholarships, Awards and Student Aid.

Four Woodrow Wilson Fellows who received 1970 grants for graduate study are now enrolled in the UNC Departments of English and History here.

The four students are among 200 Woodrow Wilson Fellows to receive grants totaling $420,000. They are: Heinrich R. Bettich of Durham, Beverly Dianne Miller of Fayetteville, Kevin Joseph McGovern of Philadelphia and Walter Lee Williams of Pittsboro.

Representatives from 12 North Carolina school systems will be at UNC during October and November to interview prospective teachers, according to a School of Education spokesman.

Interested persons, particularly January graduates, may apply at the teacher Placement Bureau, 103 Peabody Hall, to reserve time for the interviews. The telephone number is 933-2072.

The first interviews are scheduled Tuesday, Oct. 20, for the Winston-Salem/Forsyth County Schools, Winston-Salem. Wednesday, Oct. 21, representatives of the Edgecombe County Schools, Tarboro, will interview interested candidates. Especially needed are primary, elementary, special education and English teachers. Chatham County Schools, Pittsboro, will interview prospects on Thursday, Oct. 22; Durham County Schools, Durham, will meet candidates on Tuesday, Oct. 27.

Also scheduled this month: Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools, Charlotte, Wednesday, Oct. 28; and Wake County Schools, Raleigh, Thursday, Oct. 29.

Dr. John E. Wilson of the Department of Biochemistry in the School of Medicine will speak about the brain in a seminar next Wednesday.

The speech, "Changes in Brain Macromolecules During Behavior," will be delivered at 4 p.m., in room 128 of Wilson Hall. Coffee and tea will be served preceding the lecture at 3:45 in the first floor lobby of Wilson Hall.

Three UNC professors have translated nearly 100 Croatian poems for "The Bridge," a literary review published by the Association of Croat Writers.

Drs. Vasa Mihailovich of the Slavic Languages Department, and Ronald Moran and Charles David Wright of the English Department worked on the issue devoted to "Postwar Croatian Poetry" for more than a year.

Croatia is one of six republics in Yugoslavia. More than 23 per cent of all Yugoslavians are Croats.

Three linguists from UNC will deliver papers at the fourth Southeastern Conference on Linguistics (SECOL IV) Oct. 16 in Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Maria Tsiapera, chairman of the UNC Department of Linguistics and non-Western Languages; Lloyd Anderson, linguistics instructor, and Charles Ruhl, Ph.D. candidate at UNC will speak.

A workshop dealing with tenant-management relations in public housing will be held at UNC Oct. 12-13.

The workshop is sponsored by the Community Action Training Center of the School of Social Work and is funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, through the N.C. Division of Community Planning, Department of Local Affairs.

Denis Levertov, writer in residence at UNC, will give a reading of her poems at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Gerrard Hall. The public is invited.

Miss Levertov's most recent volume of poems is "Relearning the Alphabet," published in March by New Directions. She has published seven books of verse since 1957.

The National Science Foundation has awarded UNC a grant of $124,900 for research entitled "Alternative Strategies for Southern Development and Poverty Reduction."

Overall goal of the research is to contribute toward a formulation of alternative plans for economic development and the reduction of poverty in the South.

Directors and managers from leading outdoor drama companies in the United States will attend the eighth annual Managers Conference Oct. 16-17 in Chapel Hill.

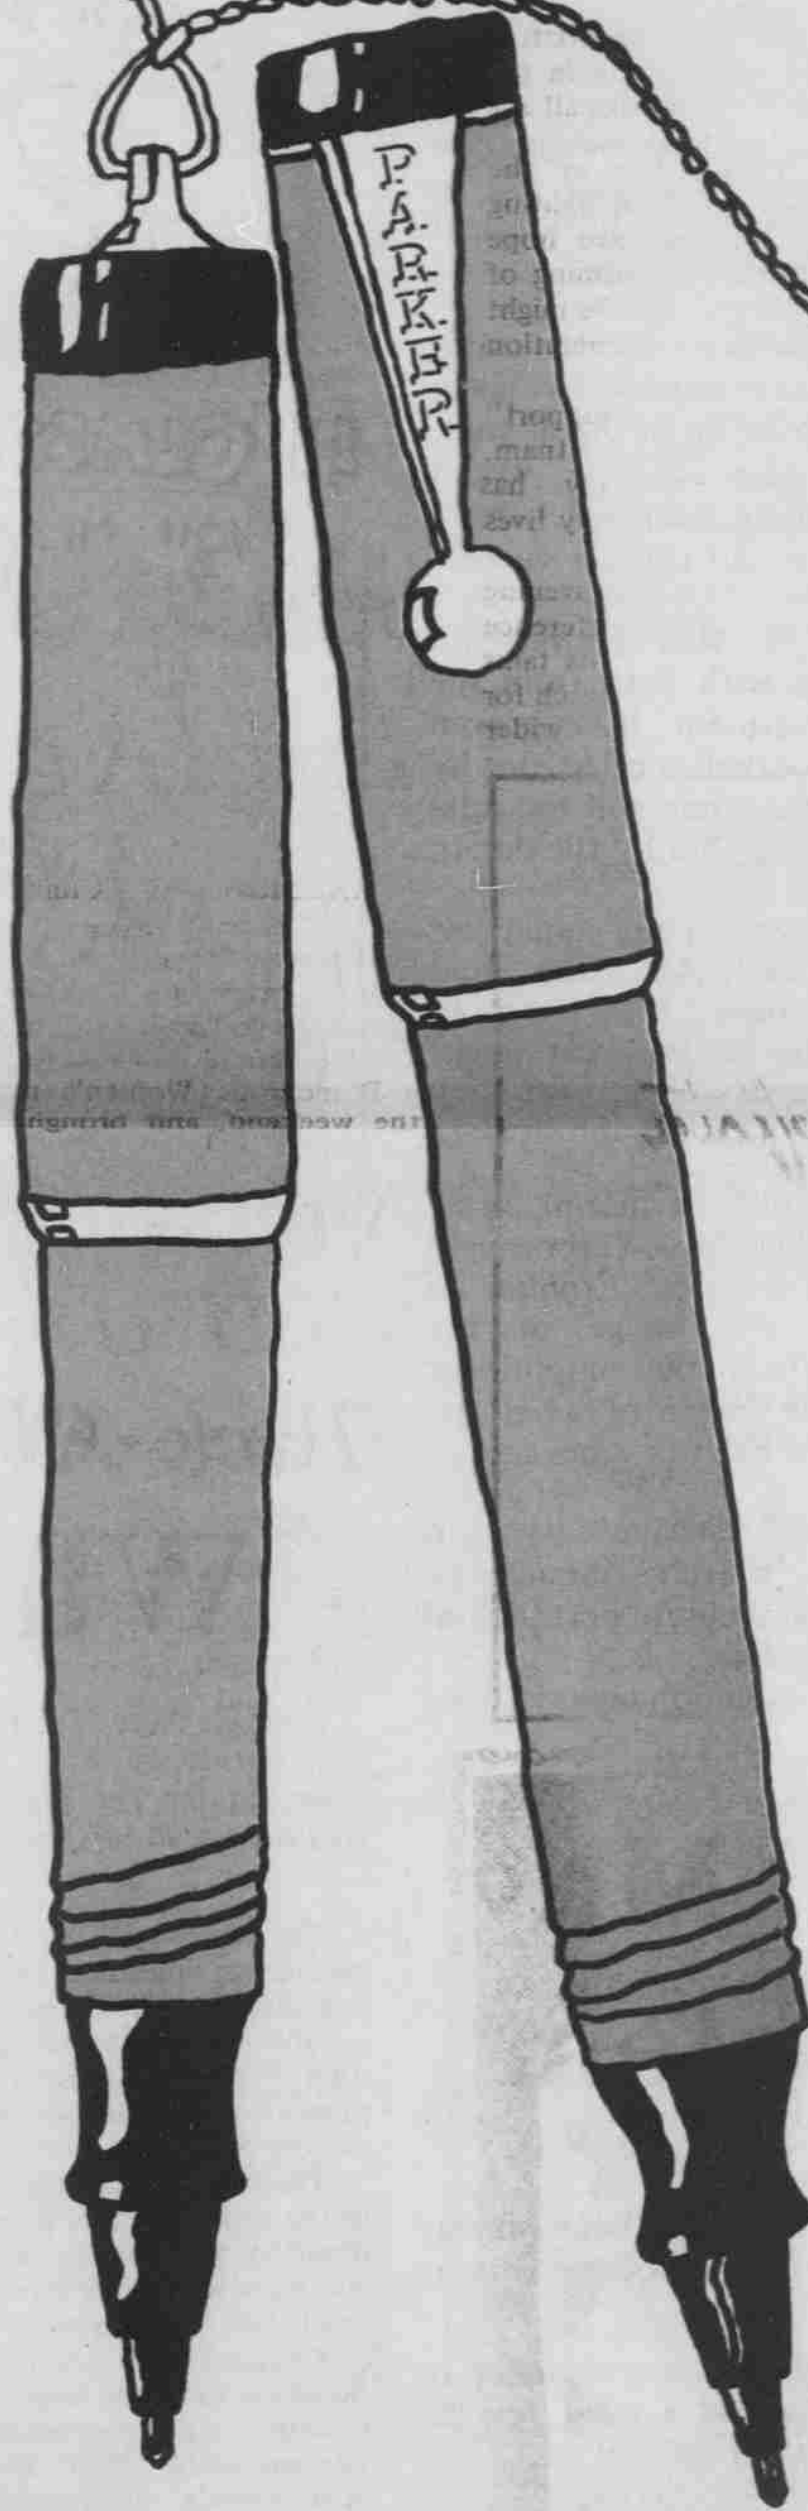

The conference is sponsored by the Institute of Outdoor Drama at UNC.

Methods of improving production quality will be discussed at 10 a.m. Sat., Oct. 17, by Dr. David Weiss, scene designer for several dramas, and Dr. Christian Moe, author of "Creating Historical Drama."

Big Red believes in equal rights for women.

A Big Red just for men?
That's unenlightened, we stormed.
Surely you've heard of women!
Women? Our Parker designers blushed.
(They lead very sheltered lives.)
Women, we sighed. Liberated, equal, independent, unshackled, brave and glorious women.
Who says they don't deserve to own an equally funky red pen? Why with their orange-dotted-green-striped-purple-paisley'd gear, they're every bit as funky as men.
And who says they don't have the same right to a soft tip pen that's refillable?

They can't afford throwaways, either.
They're just as short of bread.
Still, we pointed out, women are somewhat different. Their hands are usually smaller. So how about a not-so-big Big Red they can really get a grip on?
And their hands are already full. So how about putting their pen on a necklace?
That did it. Our designers were all choked up.
So now there's a Big Red for Women.
Who says you can't buy a swinging gift for $5?

BIG RED WRITES BLUE FOR WOMEN. REFILLS WITH 4 COLORS. IN CAMPUS STORES, AND DOWNTOWN. $5. MEN'S VERSION, SAME PRICE. DON'T YOU KNOW SOMEBODY WORTH IT? PARKER
