TETERBORO, N.J.—President Nixon took personal command of the closing Republican campaign drive Saturday, and amid minor rock-throwing and heckling episodes, urged America to answer advocates of violence with votes on election day.

At Burlington, Vt.—first stop on a one-day barnstorming tour into four states—a few small rocks were thrown in the direction of the President's party at the airport. None landed close to Nixon and apparently no one was hit.

Setting a tempo reminiscent of his own presidential campaign, Nixon flew from Vermont to New Jersey where he hopped by helicopter from Newark to GOP rallies in Teterboro and at Ocean Grove, N.J., with another stop ahead at Lancaster, Pa.

After the swing through New Jersey and Pennsylvania, it was on to Wisconsin where Nixon participates in a motorcade at Green Bay for Republican senate and gubernatorial candidates.

The President on his first major 1970 campaign effort, covering 3,000 miles in 13 and a half hours, asked his audiences to give him a new GOP Congress that

Duke Planning Peace Dept.

DURHAM, N.C.—Duke University has instituted an academic course on "The Problems and Techniques of Peace" as a "corollary" to the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

University President Terry Sanford announced the course in a letter to members of the university community.

He said the move toward a Peace Department was suggested by Student Government President Hutch Travers last spring.

would support his efforts for peace, anti-inflation, and progressive government.

His four state swing was the first of a series in which Nixon is expected to visit as many as 18 to 20 states, using his personal prestige to tip the scales for GOP candidates in the off-year election battles for control of the House and Senate and state government.

Nixon will take off again on Monday for two days of barnstorming in six other key states—Ohio, North Dakota, Missouri, Tennessee, Indiana and North Carolina.

FBI Adds Coeds To Wanted List

WASHINGTON—The FBI added to its growing most wanted list of fugitives Saturday two coed revolutionaries wanted in the fatal shooting of a policeman during a $26,585 holdup of a Boston bank.

The FBI identified the women, both white and 21 years of age, as Susan Edith Saxe, a magna cum laude 1970 graduate of Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass., and later a graduate student there, and Katherine Ann Power, a former Brandeis senior this year.

The coeds were said to belong to "a small revolutionary-type organization which, in addition to attacking military and police forces, reportedly advocated violent attacks against established society and robberies to further aims and provide financial contributions to such organizations as the Black Panther party."

The women are charged in federal

Canada Continues Crackdown In Face Of More Terrorism

MONTREAL—With more than 250 terrorist leaders and sympathizers in jail, the government Saturday pressed its crackdown on the Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) which it said had plotted further kidnaps, bombings and assassinations of public officials to back demands for separation of Quebec from Canada.

Parliament met in extraordinary Saturday session to debate the controversial abridgement of many of the nation's civil liberties. There still was no word on the fate of British diplomat James R. Cross or Quebec Labor Minister Pierre LaPorte, whose kidnapping by the FLQ plunged the nation into crisis.

The police crackdown on the outlawed FLQ appeared to slacken Saturday. No new arrests were reported for several hours and it appeared the government was waiting for word from the kidnapers of Cross and LaPorte of what their next move might be.

Invocation of the emergency War Measures Act Friday by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau suspended the Canadian Bill of Rights and outlawed the FLQ. It broadened police powers, permitting arrest without specific charges and prisoners to be held without bond.

Government officials in Quebec said the extreme measures were necessitated by information from Quebec provincial officials that the FLQ was ready to intensify its terrorism campaign.

The government said these measures included further kidnappings of public officials, assassinations and stepped-up bombings of public buildings.

The government said thousands of sticks of dynamite had been stolen in recent months, leading to its speculation the FLQ had wearied of its tactics and was preparing a new more extreme round of terrorism to gain separatism for French-speaking Quebec from the rest of English-speaking Canada.

To back up his use of emergency powers—the first time the extreme measures had been used in peacetime—Trudeau mobilized 4,000 federal troops to aid the 9,000 police officers in Quebec province. The police dragnets Friday nabbed 255 FLQ members and caches of weapons. The army troops guarded buildings and public officials in major cities in the province, freeing the police to search for the terrorists and their sympathizers.

The FLQ has been silent since its communique Wednesday morning which reiterated its demands for the release of 23 political prisoners in Quebec jails.

Among those arrested were several well-known names in Quebec, including FLQ lawyer Robert Lemieux, Michel Chartrand, the sharp-tongued Montreal labor leader, and singer Pauline Julien.

Sadat Inaugurated Fighting Erupts In Jordan

Heavy fighting erupted Saturday in several areas of northern Jordan between Palestinian guerrillas and Jordanian army forces. It was the first report of major clashes since the nine-day civil war in Jordan last month.

The fighting flared as Anwar Sadat was sworn in as president of Egypt to succeed Gamal Abdel Nasser whose foreign and domestic policies he has pledged to follow until Arab territory occupied by Israel in the 1967 War has been recovered.

Nasser died Sept. 28 of a heart attack which some sources attributed in part to the fighting between the Palestinian guerrillas and the Jordanian army.

UPI correspondent W. G. Kirolos witnessed some of the new fighting near Torra on the border with Syria. He said fighting was still going on when he and other newsmen were ordered to leave during the afternoon because the guerrillas feared the town itself would come under attack.

Kirolos reported that 30 to 40 tanks were advancing in the area when the newsmen left for Amman. He quoted a guerrilla spokesman as saying the fighting started at daybreak when the army opened fire with tanks, artillery and machine guns.

The guerrilla spokesman said the battles raged around Blukos, El Al, Lemghiw and Al-Shajara near the Syrian border. He said the army was attacking Palestinian guerrilla positions.

A guerrilla spokesman in Amman earlier had accused Jordan of violating the agreement by holding 1,000 captured guerrillas in a secret prison camp in the southern desert. The truce terms had called for the release of all prisoners by both sides.

Sadat, 51, vice president under Nasser and acting president since his death of a heart attack on Sept. 28, was nominated by the ruling Arab Socialist Union (ASU), Egypt's only legal political party, and the National Assembly. He was the only candidate in a national referendum Friday by ASU members in which he obtained 90.04 per cent of the vote.

Speaker Iabib Shukair opened the assembly session by announcing the official results of the referendum after which Sadat took the oath of office for a full six-year term. The ceremony was broadcast live to the nation.

Before attending the session, Arab sources said Sadat conferred with other Egyptian leaders on matters of policy and on the formation of a new government. He is scheduled to make a major policy statement Sunday.
