

No Way To Be Governor, Lee Tells Canadians

by Evans Witt
Staff Writer

"No matter how good a politician I am, I can't be governor of North Carolina—and that's a cold, hard fact," Chapel Hill Mayor Howard Lee said as he discussed a wide range of topics with members of the Toronto Exchange Monday.

Lee met with the 31 students from the University of Toronto and their UNC counterparts in the faculty lounge of Dey Hall early Monday afternoon to give the Canadians another perspective on problems in the South.

Lee also commented on the control which the University has traditionally exercised over the town and how this relationship is changing.

The mayor opened the discussion with a short talk in which he emphasized the great progress which has been made in the South in the last few years in race relations, but also explained that the South, as well as the rest of the country, has a long way yet to go.

"Great strides have been made in politics—but these are really just symbols. Symbols can, however, lead to progress," he said.

Lee also pointed to the fact that in 1967 there were no black mayors in the United States, but that today 55 black men are mayors of American cities.

Many grave problems and roadblocks still exist for the American black today, according to Lee.

"Racism and discrimination are still here—though we don't want to admit it," Lee explained.

"The system has been so designed that it has made many people feel that blacks are capable of doing certain jobs. Racial prejudice is so ingrained that people can't see a black as another person," he said.

But Lee also stressed the fact to the Toronto students that the South had come a tremendous distance since 1954.

"The South has come a long way. But the North has stood still," Lee commented.

Lee said the South is leading the country in the number of black teachers and in the number of integrated schools, as well as in the number of black politicians coming into office.

Lee mentioned his recent appointment as vice-chairman of the State Democratic Party for minorities as an event in Southern party politics that is without precedent, "even including the Reconstruction period."

"There is a possibility in 1972 that we could elect a black lieutenant governor of North Carolina," he said.

But Lee also said that no longer will any one party be able to count on the black vote as a matter of course.

Asked about the nature of the relationship of the University and the town Lee pointed out the various problems and good facets of having the University as such a dominant force in the community.

"Let's face it—without the University, Chapel Hill wouldn't be here and you can see the ways in which the University controls the town," Lee said.

Lee pointed to the University's control of the utilities, their ownership of 3,300 acres of non-taxable land within the city, and the University's control of the airport—"just to mention a few reasons."

But Lee said he thought that the "town-gown relationship had reached the point where the town was going to begin exerting more power.

"We do expect to be able to take over the utilities in six to eight months and to be able to work out something in regards to the airport," he commented.

Lee also outlined his plan to the students for attracting small industries to provide the needed jobs in the community and to break the job monopoly the University now has.

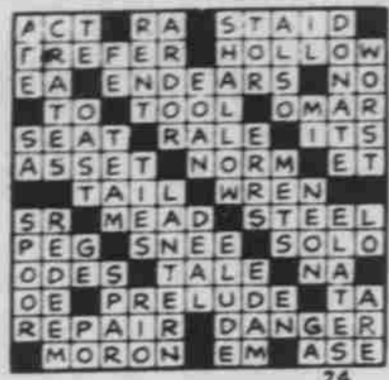

Lee also said he hoped to see the town develop and grow but that he hoped to preserve at least a part of the town—the area between Columbia and Henderson Streets—in the style which characterized the "village" for many years.

Listen for the sounds of love...

Where do you hear them?

In a plea for help from someone who needs it? In a dialogue between students and the Establishment? In a talk session for a marriage-off-the-rocks? At a Catholic Mass conducted in an Episcopal Church?

You'd be surprised.

The sounds of love are everywhere — anyone can hear them. If they listen.

The Paulists listen. But, like everything in life, the things that matter most are the hardest.

It isn't easy being a Paulist. But then, the best things in life never are.
