

Promising frosh key to Hilton's indoor squad

by Mark Whicker
Sports Writer

Track coach Joe Hilton, seeking to balance graduation and injury losses with a group of promising freshmen, unveils his indoor team today in an intra-squad meet at the Tin Can.

The pole vault and broad jump events will start today at 3:30, and the triple jump begins at 4:15.

Events include the high jump, the shot put, the high hurdles, and the 60, 440, 880, mile and two mile runs, while the pole vault and broad jump were held Tuesday.

Carolina finished second indoors to Maryland in the conference meet last year in Woolen, and tied South Carolina 50-50 in its only conference dual meet.

"Most of our boys are in fair shape now," says Hilton, "although we won't be working for good times or distances in this meet. It's basically just to see how far each of the boys is coming along."

Last year's 600-yard ACC champ Terry Sellers has graduated, along with pole vaulter Rick Wilson and hurdler Dennis Suich.

More damaging to the Tar Heels are the injuries to Dave Hilliard, one of the ACC's best high jumpers, and hurdler Reid Hilton, the coach's son.

Hilliard suffered a bad shoulder separation and Coach Hilton isn't expecting him back until next fall. Reid Hilton is recuperating from a knee injury.

Carolina should have a deeper, better group of distance men; all are in shape after cross-country season. Joining veterans Larry Widgeon and Pat Grady are Tony Waldrop, who copped the conference cross-country title, Mike Garcia, Steve Grathwohl and Mike Caldwell.

Freshman B.H. Edwards from Eden, N.C. is a welcome addition at shot put. The weight men are led by senior John Jessup, the defending conference champ.

Jessup's fling of 56'2" was an ACC meet record. Sophomore Henry Jefferson has also developed.

Hank Snowden, a highly recruited prospect from Cleveland, joins Hubert West, Mike Canzonieri, Neil Bolick and Bob Weaver in the sprints. Snowden was a 9.8 100-yard man in high school and has turned in a 6.3 time in the 60. The conference's best last year indoors was 6.2.

West, a sophomore who placed in five events once last year, will compete in the broad jump and triple jump with Darryl Kelly, last year's freshman record breaker.

Kelly placed tenth in the NCAA outdoor meet in the triple jump and won the ACC easily.

Coach Hilton says that Don Wheless, in the 440, is one of the most improved team members. Snowden and Dave Atrial, who also broad jumps, join Wheless in both the open 440 and the relays.

The loss of Suich and Hilton put the pressure on high hurdler Mike Thompson, Craig Loudy, a freshman from New Jersey, should help there.

Although Wilson is gone, Jeff Hilliker and freshman Danny Deacon will make the pole vault another strong event. Deacon is a freshman from Honolulu who "has great natural ability," according to Hilton.

"He's strong and quick, and just needs some polishing in technique to be a fine pole vaulter."

Charles Ball and John Rucker are the high jumpers in the absence of Hilliard. "The high jump was one of our strongest events last season," says Hilton, "and Ball has come along well in practices."

The Tar Heels have a rough schedule this winter, with a tri-meet bringing Duke and Tennessee to the Tin Can January 16 and the North Carolina Big Seven meet February 19.

The ACC meet will again be held in Woolen February 27.

Maryland, the perennial ACC ruler, has enough champions returning to insure another good year, and South Carolina and Duke will join the Tar Heels as contenders.

Tar Babies win

Quick frontline sparks victory

by David Zucchini
Sports Writer

The Carolina frontline, with 6-9 center Bobby Jones and 6-6 forward John O'Donnell combining for 54 points, outmaneuvered and outshot the taller but slower frontcourt of Virginia to lead the Tar Babies to a 74-63 victory Tuesday night.

Jones easily outdistanced everyone on the court with 18 big rebounds, while 6-9 AJ Stahurski and 6-5 Bob McKeag hauled down eight each for Virginia.

The two teams shot almost identically from the field, with the Tar Babies claiming a slight edge with a 43.6

percentage over the 42.4 clip of the Cavayearlings. Carolina also outrebounded Virginia by a 41-36 margin.

The Tar Babies, with Jones and O'Donnell leading the charge, weaved through Virginia's close-knit zone and kept the Cavayearlings at bay with a suffocating man-to-man defense en route to the well-played triumph, their third of the season against one loss.

The Tar Babies penetrated Virginia's zone early and sped to a 4-0 lead on two freethrows by Jones, who scored 25 points, and a short jumper by O'Donnell, but the Cavayearlings tied the contest at six-on on a 15-foot jumper by 6-7 Bob McCurdy, marking one of the six times during the first half that the contest was knotted.

Neither team was able to pull ahead in the early going until the Tar Babies, by courtesy of two technical fouls called on the Virginia bench, pulled out to a 38-33 lead. Moses Parker connected on two of the charity shots after an O'Donnell layup had staked the Tar Babies to a 36-33 lead with 4:30 left in the half.

The Tar Babies stretched their halftime margin to seven with 17 seconds left in the period as O'Donnell, who scored a game-high 29 points, took a flashy assist from Robert Evans and glided in for a layup.

Virginia, behind Bob McKeag's 26 points, stayed with the Tar Babies for most of the second half until 6-3 forward Bill Crouch, who had 8 points, threw in an O'Donnell pass for a 59-51 UNC margin with 6:47 left in the contest.

The Cavayearlings never again got closer than seven points and the Tar Babies coasted the rest of the way with the help of a slowdown four corners offense.

Following O'Donnell and Jones in the Carolina scoring column were 5-11 guard Billy Hite with four points, along with Moses Parker, John Cameron, and Alan Mayfield, who all chipped in with two points each.

Illini whip gymnasts; Hesser, Kravitz shine

by Ben Kushner

The Carolina gymnastics team, improving considerably on its weekend showing, suffered a 161.25-124.5 loss to Illinois Monday night in Carmichael Auditorium.

Heel squads travel today

The Carolina swimming team opposes Navy today in Annapolis, Md., in its last meet before the Christmas recess.

The Tar Heels will be attempting to rebound from a disastrous 71-42 loss to defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion Maryland over the weekend.

Last year the Midshipmen sunk Carolina, 63-50.

Coach Sam Barnes' wrestling team is also on the road today, as they travel to William & Mary to meet the Indians, who defeated them 29-13 in 1969.

Coach Fred Sanders, who said before the meet that he hoped UNC could manage 120 points, watched his squad exceed expectations.

Illinois won firsts in all six events, with Bob Ito taking the floor exercises with a 9.15 judgment and the long horse with a 9.3 score.

Illini Coach Bill Rotzheim said he was not surprised by his team's effort, adding that they have improved with every meet. Illinois is now 4-1.

Carolina Captain John Hesser and mustachioed Murry Kravitz paced the Tar Heels with fine showings in vaulting and on the side horse and parallel bar. Kravitz, one of several promising freshmen on the squad, racked up scores of 8.05 and 7.55 in the latter two events. Rotzheim, impressed by the UNC performance, said, "Sanders has got something going here. He could dominate in a couple of years."

The UNC gymnasts travel to the Eastern Gymnastics Clinic in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Dec. 26-30 and returns to Chapel Hill Jan. 8 to meet national champion Southern Illinois.
