

Flick fare ranges from Disney to Altman

Gone With the Wind—What can one say except that it is one of the truly great movies? See it again.—R

Diary of a Mad Housewife—Richard Benjamin is very poor and his inadequacies spoil many important scenes. Aside from him, the movie is nearly flawless. The general artificiality of Mrs. Perry's scripts has here become stylization, which takes some getting used to, but the film grows and grows into a superb dramatic experience. Carrie Snodgrass is definitely in the running for an Oscar.—G

Five Easy Pieces—This movie is not a complete success, as many of its scenes just do not come off, especially in the first thirty minutes. When the scenes do work, it is partly due to fine scripting, and superior work in small roles, but is mostly due to the absolutely stunning performance by Jack Nicholson, giving the definitive portrayal of a hollow shell of a man, one of the great screen acting jobs. Though the picture is deeply flawed and drastically uneven, it gives the final impression of being very fine. Above all, Nicholson is not to be missed.—G

The Owl and the Pussycat—The story to this tale is very trite, as best evidenced in the drippy final scene, but most of it is hilarious, due to bright comedy lines, inventive direction, and Barbra Streisand. The incomparable Barbra just keeps getting better and better.—G

The Aristocats—One of the best Disney cartoon features. The plot smacks heavily of 101 Dalmations and Lady and the Tramp, but it is the animal characters that matter, and here they are delightful and charming. Go back a few years and enjoy.—D, G

2001: A Space Odyssey—This must be the most boring great movie ever made, but a great movie it truly is. Every facet of the production reeks with brilliance, and each new viewing will uncover something else. Kubrick's snail pacing just does not matter.—R

Tora, Tora, Tora—The first hour of this is not a movie, but a dull, confused, and skimpy history lesson, with actors stiffly explaining everything to each other. After that, it picks up, almost in spite of itself. Some of the facts presented are interesting, even astounding, and the attack itself is magnificently staged. It will leave you breathless. Zero as cinema art, but as a war movie, it definitely has its moments.—R, G

Catch 22—Mike Nichols' new movie starts off just fine and then goes straight downhill. In the end only the farce scenes are really successful, with the tying in of war and capitalism particularly poorly done. Moreover the film seems to have been sloppily edited down from many times its length (and it's not just the structure). Not really bad, but very disappointing.—D, R, G

There's a Girl in My Soup—A numbingly conventional sex comedy, leering and unfunny, with much that looks as if it came from a bad Grace Kelly movie. Peter Sellers starts off with a performance of great dry wit, but even he succumbs to the general lack of fizz. Slick, professional, worthless.—R

Brewster McCLOUD—A tiresome piece of fashionable cinema. Robert Altman has tried to surpass "Mash" in the outrageousness of its humor, but he has weak jokes and repeats them too often. The editing and direction seem to have been done by a computer fed with last year's movies. Strictly for pseudo-intellectuals.—CH, G

Not reviewed. Opinions expressed are those of a consensus of critics:

3 in the Cellar—A sequel to you-know-what. Supposedly better than the last one.—CH

Zig-Zag—A thriller that doesn't thrill.—CH

Rio Lobo—A western directed by Howard Hawks, starring John Wayne. Not one of his best.—D

Burn—A drama of a slave revolt starring Marlon Brando. Pretty weak.—D

The Vampire Lovers—Another piece of horror-sex trash from American-International.—R
Kama Sutra—A disgusting, revolting, ludicrous skin flick.—CH

Campus activities calendar

UNC Readers Theater will present "The Bad Seed," Friday night, January 8, at 7 p.m. No admission charge. Carolina Union Coffee House. Regular Coffee House will be open.

The Cinematheque. Tonight, Ingmar Bergman's "Brink of Life." Shows at seven and nine in Murphey 111. Admission $1.00.

TALKING POINTS: A place to unload your mind with trained graduate students. Suite C, Student Union, 7-11 p.m. Sunday through Thursday.

Persons interested in working as secretary in the Student Attorney General's office should go to Suite B between 2 and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday for interviews regarding the position.

Applications for the Women's International Hall in Winston dorm are now being accepted for spring semester. Any graduate or undergraduate student is eligible to apply for this unique living experience. Applications may be picked up at the International Student Center or the Winston desk. Applications may be turned in at room 212 Winston. Deadline for applications is Jan. 15.

FRATERNITY FALL PLEDGE CLASSES: Don't forget to make your kite for the Kappa Alpha Theta kite fly on Jan. 8, 3:30 p.m. at Fetzer Field. Most unusual kite that flies wins a keg of beer. All brothers come and support your pledges. RSVP, 968-9398.

Morrison Residence College Ski Club has rented two cabins at Banner Elk, N.C. (near Beech and Sugar Mountains) for the nights of Wednesday, January 27 and Thursday, January 28, over semester break. Anyone interested in staying in one of these for $4.50 a night should call Bobyn Walker at 933-4242 or Joe Grier at 933-4215.

The UNC India Association will present "Shatranj," an Indian movie, tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the School of Public Health auditorium. Based on a very timely and topical tale, the movie has been taken in Eastman color and has English sub-titles while the key roles have been played by Mr. Rajendrakumar and Miss Waheeda Rehman. Tickets will be available at the door at the rates of $1.50, $1.25, and $.75 for non-members, members, and children, respectively.

Personalities

Lawrence Sterne, author of "Tristram Shandy" and "A Sentimental Journey," was also a clergyman but he wasn't as solemn as most of his colleagues were. The morning after his wedding night, he had to give a sermon. The scriptural reference on which his sermon was based was: "I have labored all the night long in vain."

U.S. customs official—Have you anything to declare?

Oscar Wilde—Nothing... nothing, that is, except my genius.
