

Coed James plans progressing

by Pam Phillips

Projected plans to make Hinton James a coed dormitory are progressing according to schedule, James sources say. Charlie Miller, governor of James Residence College, said Tuesday dorm spirit was extremely favorable towards the project. He termed the proceedings as "super fantastic."

Miller said the James Advisory Board and members of the residence college were working to help give the girls "all the comforts of North Campus."

The advisory board has been meeting weekly "to provide an extremely well-balanced social program" for the girls. Miller also credited "a lot of people who are working actively to make this come off."

Other than minor structural changes, Miller foresees no great difficulties in the move and hopes to "iron out any problems before next fall."

Mark Evens, former co-chairman of the Residence College Federation (RCF), said "I think it will be a success."

Evens hopes there will be more freshmen girls assigned to the dorm than any other class.

Evens expressed displeasure that three floors will not be coed. He thinks there should be as close to a 50-50 ratio as possible and hopes to see the situation corrected in the future.

Evens said there is a lack of enthusiasm among residents of Winston for moving out to South Campus, mainly because of the distance.

Winston Dorm will be converted into a men's dormitory next year forcing the relocation of space for women.

Evens also feels more girls could be induced to live on South Campus if the bus system were made free or an alternative was provided so each student would not have to pay every time he boarded a bus.

He has suggested this method could be accomplished by additional student funding.

Steve Saunders, RCF chairman, feels the plans are "a step in the right direction."

"There will be some girls who will not want to live there but that always happened to men, too," Saunders commented.

On the change of Winston into a men's dorm, Saunders indicated there was a possibility of forming a new residence college consisting of Connor and Joyner, both girls' dorms, and Winston and Alexander, men's dorms.

Because of the ratio and the closeness of the dorms, some residents have expressed interest in joining for residence college activities, he said.

Saunders, who will be living in Winston next year, stated there will be no definite steps taken in the considered formation of a new residence college until next fall when the freshmen arrive. He said he hoped to help in the merger.

Chancellor's committees are open to students

Students interested in serving on the Chancellor's Advisory Committees are asked to sign up for interviews this week at the Carolina Union Information Desk. Interviews will be held next week.

The committees are composed of students, faculty and administration.

"This is an excellent opportunity to serve with faculty and administration on University committees and to influence University decisions," Cam West, special assistant to Student Body President Joe Stallings, said Monday. "I hope to see a great number of students sign up for interviews."

The committees with student openings are Space Committee, Administrative Board of Student Affairs, Buildings and Grounds, Traffic and Safety, Committee on Scholarships and Student Aid, University Day Planning, Committee on Teaching and Curriculum, Committee for Established Lectures, Facilities Use, Calendar, Student Stores Committee and Status of Minorities and Disadvantaged Committee on University Priorities, and the Committee on University Residential Life (CURL).

Student Government will also be conducting interviews next week. Students interested in working with the student co-op, a proposal initiated by Joe Stallings, student body president, to obtain items at lower prices than the Student Stores charges, are asked to sign up for interviews.

The State Affairs Committee, chaired by Lacy Presnell, will be conducting interviews next week also.

The Judicial Affairs Committee has been created to work with the Student Government lawyer. Interested students are encouraged to sign up for this committee.

Sign-ups for all the committees will continue through this week at the Union Desk. Interviews will be held Monday from 1:30 to 4 p.m., Tuesday from 3:45 to 5 p.m. and Thursday from 3:45 to 5 p.m.

'Ugly Men' collecting cash

by Sue English
Staff Writer

Anyone noticing weird or grotesque-looking characters wandering around campus this week should dismiss it as a part of the Campus Chest Ugly Man on Campus (UMOC) contest, which began Monday and will continue until next Monday at 5 p.m.

The object of the contest is to raise money for charity in a fun, competitive manner.

Sororities, fraternities and residence colleges will participate in the "Beauty and the Beast" contest, with sororities sponsoring the "beauties" and fraternities and residence colleges backing the "beasts."

Ugly man representatives dress and make themselves up in a grotesque manner, and adopt nicknames such as last year's "Sweat Hog" and "Scooby Rhody."

Sororities and fraternities elected their representatives. Competition was held in the residence colleges last week during which each floor of the college chose one ugly man, who competed with those of the other floors in the collection of money to see who the final representative of the dorm would be.

The three divisions of the residence colleges are high rise, low rise, and independent. Fraternities are divided into large and small houses.

In order to reduce the competition between fraternities, a ceiling has been set for this year. Every large fraternity that collects $400 will receive a trophy. The ceiling will be set on a comparative basis for the small fraternities.

Residence colleges, fraternities and sororities will all collect money on campus and downtown. Only the residence colleges will be allowed to solicit in the dorms, and only fraternities and sororities will collect from apartments and residential areas.

Everyone soliciting for Campus Chest has been given an authorization card which permits them to solicit in the name of Campus Chest.

David Putnam, Alpha Phi Omega (APO) member and chairman of the drive, said charity fliers will be distributed explaining where the donations will go.

Money from the drive will go to the following organizations: UNC Student Bar Foundation; Student Health Action Committee; North Carolina Heart Association; Foreign Student Emergency Fund; Chapel Hill Halfway House; Victory Village Day Care Center; Murdoch-O'Berry Center; Carolina Opportunity Fund; and YMCA-YWCA of UNC.

UMOC trophies will be given at the end of the Campus Chest activities to the organization in each division that collects the most money.

There will be one trophy for the sororities, one for each of the three divisions of residence colleges, and one for each of the fraternities that reaches the established ceiling.

Cliff Moore, publicity chairman for Campus Chest, is anticipating a large amount of participation in the UMOC contest. Last year's contest netted approximately $6,000.
