Student voting bill passes Legislature

by Woody Doster
Staff Writer

A resolution asking the N.C. General Assembly to allow students to vote in primary elections was unanimously passed Thursday night by Student Legislature (SL).

In other business, Student Body President Joe Stallings presented the Jim Tatum Award for athletic and scholastic excellence to UNC football star Don McCauley.

Next year's primary election falls on May 2, when students at branches of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Charlotte, Raleigh and Asheville, and Duke University will be taking exams under the revised calendar system.

"North Carolina allows absentee voting in the November general elections if a person is out of his county," said the resolutions' author Gerry Cohen. "We are merely interested in getting this provision extended to the May 2 primary for students and their spouses."

"The primary is very important in this state, since North Carolina is basically a one-party state," he continued.

The May 2 primary will be for presidential, senatorial, congressional, gubernatorial and N.C. General Assembly candidates.

Copies of the resolution have been sent to N.C. legislators Carl Smith and Ike Andrews from Chapel Hill's district, Congressman Nick Galifianakis, Gov. Robert Scott, and the Democratic National Committee.

Cohen added that a copy was sent to Bob Nelson, staff director of the McGovern Committee, an arm of the Democratic National Committee charged with seeing that all states make their Democratic party open on an equal basis to all people.

"They are very interested in what is effectively the denial of voting rights to students," Cohen said.

The Jim Tatum Award, which went to Don McCauley, was founded in 1959 on the death of Tatum, an outstanding UNC athlete. It is open to participants in any sport who exemplifies high moral character, scholarship and leadership ability.

In presenting the award to McCauley, Stallings called him "a leader on the football team who brought much acclaim to the University and to the Atlantic Coast Conference."

Previous recipients of the award were Ken Willard, Danny Talbot and Charlie Scott.

A bill to re-establish the summer school activities fee and to formalize the composition of the Summer School Student Government Board passed by consent.

The Board will consist of the president of the student body, the chairman of the Residence College Federation, the chairman of the Publications Board, the chairman of each of SL's standing committees and three students appointed by the student body president.

Provisions were also made for other appointments if some of the officers were unable to remain in Chapel Hill this summer.

The Board is entrusted with managing the summer school student activities fees.

Bills were also passed to make the terms of office of legislators and Student Government officials coincide, to provide an oath of office for Student Government officials, and to appropriate $250 for the rent of the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies' chamber in New West for the use of SL.

The following student legislators were absent without excuse from the Thursday night meeting:

Dennis Tharrington, Don Foster, Men's District (MD) I; Charles Gaylor, Tom Morris, MD II; Gordon Woodruff, MD IV; Robert Weaver, MD XII;

Lorna Jones, Women's District (WD) II; Marilyn Brock, WD IV; Kitty Murphee, WD V; Cathy Roth, Mary Scott, WD VIII.

In Chemistry Department

Grads lack T.A. posts

by Woody Doster
Staff Writer

For the first time in several years, the demand for teaching assistantships in the chemistry department has exceeded the supply.

Dr. H.H. Dearman, chairman of the department's Graduate Studies Committee, told professors and graduate students at a meeting called to clear up "a number of misunderstandings" that the department would presently be able to afford "about 70" teaching assistantships next year.

Before the meeting was called 20 graduate teaching assistants were sent letters informing them they would not receive an assistantship next year because the department understood that they would complete their degrees before that time.

"We canvassed the students and their faculty advisers, and it was my understanding that these students would be leaving the University," Dr. Dearman said.

John Flowers, a member of the Graduate Student's Grievance Committee, said "some of the people weren't sure that they were leaving until they got the letters."

To clear up the misunderstandings, Flowers called a meeting of graduate students and professors Monday night.

"There are the facts of life," Dr. Dearman said. "We have $140,000 in next year's budget for teaching assistants, and their salary is around $3,000 per year."

"When resources were exceeded by demand, we had to establish priorities for receiving a teaching assistantship," he continued.

The criteria established by the department for receiving a teaching assistantship were a student's record as a teaching assistant, a report of his major professor and two other professors, his number of years in residence, a general effort on the part of the department to support as many teaching assistants as possible and the general desirability of each student finishing his degree program as soon as possible.

"A person who takes 10 years to complete his degree is taking up twice as much of the department's time and money as a person who finishes his degree in five years," Dr. Dearman commented. "This is undesirable."

The department has established a statute of limitations on degree work of eight years.

Dr. Dearman said additional money for teaching assistantships could come from a National Science Foundation/Scientific Development Award renewal.

"Four years ago the University was given about five-and-one-half million dollars for the development of a center of excellence," he said. "That grant runs out June 31 of this year but there is a chance it will be renewed."

Dr. Dearman stated the causes for the shortage of money for teaching assistantships were twofold.

"For the past two years, we have had large graduating classes in the department," he said. "Secondly, there has been a general cutback in federal support for graduate education."

"I think the meeting sufficiently cleared up the whole matter," Flowers said.

Mayday termed 'hot air'; 700 arrested thus far

United Press International

WASHINGTON—The great bronze doors of the Justice Department slammed shut Friday to keep out 1,000 antiwar protesters, but a department official dismissed their threat to shut down the government next week as "just a lot of hot air."

Police began making mass arrests a couple of hours after the demonstrators had surrounded the block-square building containing FBI headquarters and blocked several entrances to it.

By mid-afternoon, police reported having arrested "about" 200 persons, most on charges of disorderly conduct.

Officials said the normal $10 collateral required for release in such cases was not being accepted and that the protestors were being taken directly to courts for hearings.

The action at the Justice Department came at the end of a week of protests which have generated more than 700 arrests at various points in the city. It occurred on the eve of a five-day period in which demonstration leaders have vowed to paralyze the nation's capital by stopping traffic and laying siege to key federal buildings, including the Pentagon.

Shortly after the demonstration began, Deputy Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst met 10 blocks away on Capitol Hill with a group of Republican senators to brief them on the government's plan for coping with the more militant phase of protests organized by the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice plus an affiliate called the May Day Tribe.

Kleindienst said later the threat to prevent the government from functioning was "just a lot of hot air" and that he had told the senators "at worst, this is going to be nothing more than an irritant."

Washington Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson, who also briefed the senators, said "our advice to people is not to be intimidated by a bunch of radical kids."

The Justice Department

demonstration, first of any size there since the latest round of end-the-war protests opened two weeks ago, began early in the morning with the arrival of about 100 pickets.

The Defense Department said no federal troops had been brought into Washington yet but that they were prepared to move in on short notice from nearby military installations.

Infirmary director will retire in June

UNC News Bureau

Dr. Edward MacGowan Hedgpeth, director of UNC Student Health Service, will retire after the end of June this year from his administrative duties. He will remain in the University's service in the School of Medicine.

Dr. Hedgpeth, 65, is known to many generations of students and alumni since he came to be an associate University physician in the Infirmery in 1934.

He will retain the title Taylor Grandy

Professor in the University, one of the endowed professorships awarded to distinguished faculty. Dr. Hedgpeth will go on leave for six months and then will return in other work for the University.

He is a native of Elm City, N.C., was graduated from the University in 1927, attended UNC Medical School two years from 1927 to 1929, and received the M.D. degree at the University of Pennsylvania in 1931. He served his internship and residency at Geisinger Memorial Hospital, in Danville, Pennsylvania. He is married to the former Marian Reese from Danville, Pa., and they have two children.

Dr. Hedgpeth was for many years chairman of the faculty committee on admissions for the University's Medical School, and also was chairman of the Faculty Committee on Athletics.

During Gov. Dan K. Moore's administration he was chairman of a committee on the Establishment and Improvement of Alcoholic Rehabilitation Centers in North Carolina, and is a member of the Central Committee of the Morehead Foundation. He was associate University physician from 1934 to 1941 and University Physician from 1941 to the present time.

He has served as President of the Durham-Orange County Medical Society and President of the Chapel Hill Rotary Club, is a Fellow of the American Medical Association and a Fellow of the American College of Physicians. He has taught anatomy, surgery and medicine to students in the Medical School. He is a former member of the board of stewards of the University Methodist Church.

Beta pledges win Greek award

by Sue English
Staff Writer

Beta Theta Pi fraternity won Greek Week competition for the "best pledge class" and received the Elizabeth M. Beaumont trophy.

The Betas won the trophy with a total of 136 points, and were followed by Phi Delta Theta, who gave them a close race with 133 points.

Chief of Security Arthur Beaumont originated the idea for the overall trophy. Third place in Greek Week went to Chi Psi.

Tom Nash, president of the Inter Fraternity Council, said most of the fraternities went all out for the events. He specified four additional fraternities that "did a good job"—Sigma Nu, Delta Upsilon, Zeta Beta Tau and Phi Sigma Kappa.

There were several categories under which the fraternities received points. Events taking place during Greek Week April 19-23 were the Ugly Man on Campus contest, won by Bill Correll of Phi Delta Theta; the clean-up taking place at Eastgate Shopping Center; the Greek Week games on April 20; and the Campus Chest Carnival and chariot races on April 22.

Phi Delta Theta placed first in the Greek games, followed by Betas and Delta Upsilon, who tied for second place. Third place went to Phi Gamma Delta, and fourth place to Chi Phi.

A total of $835 was cleared by the Betas at the carnival, to place them first in that division.

Four fraternities were close contenders for the winning of the chariot race. Zeta Beta Tau finished first, followed by Sigma Nu, Beta and Delta Upsilon.

Nash said there was generally a "good turn-out" for the clean-up on April 19, with many fraternities showing a 100 per cent turn-out of their pledge classes.

Other considerations for the "best pledge class" were grades (Q.P.A.'s) and activities on campus. The activities were fairly well-divided among the fraternities. First in the category of grades was Delta Tau Delta, followed by Sigma Chi and then Delta Upsilon.

The Phi Deltas and Chi Psis will receive plaques for placing second and third in the Greek Week events.
