

Black to speak today on educational training

UNC News Bureau

A member of the black culture steering committee of the Pennsylvania State Commission on Higher Education will speak at an In-Service Education seminar today at the University.

Dr. Bernard C. Watson, professor and chairman of the Department of Urban Education at Temple

University, will address 30 North Carolina directors of In-Service Education training programs for staff development at 8 p.m. in Peabody Hall on campus.

The lecture is open to the public. Formerly a teacher and principal in three Gary, Indiana secondary schools, Dr. Watson is presently serving on the National Urban League's Advisory Council on Education and director of the U.S. Office of Education's Leadership Training Institute on Recruitment.

Last year, James Allen, U.S. Commissioner of Education, appointed Dr. Watson as a member of the Urban Education Task Force in Washington, D.C. He is also presently serving on the National Advisory Committee for Curriculum Innovations, the National Advisory Board of City Schools Curriculum, and the National Advisory Committee of the Martin Luther King Foundation.

Dr. Watson's numerous activities in Philadelphia include chairmanship of the "New Directions" Advisory Committee, Berean Institute, Philadelphia Urban Coalition's Education Task Force and High Education Task

Force, and the Philadelphia Committee for College Placement to name a few.

Following graduation from Indiana University, Dr. Watson received his M.Ed. degree at the University of Illinois, and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago. In 1968 he attended the Advanced Administrative Institute at Harvard University.
