

Meeting tonite on tuition hike

The meeting, sponsored by the Graduate and Professional Student Federation, will be held in 101 Greenlaw at 8:30 p.m.

Ron Mendel, a graduate student at Chapel Hill, said the purpose of the meeting will be to "give out as much information as possible on the bill, inform students as to what kind of action has already been taken, and to set up committees to coordinate our fight against this bill."

Mendel also reported that an injunction was filed this week against N.C. State University by a group of concerned students at that institution.

The students from N.C. State have filed the injunction because they felt the bill was passed without warning, and thus created great hardship.

It was also learned that the American Civil Liberties Union in Greensboro was preparing an additional suit against the bill.

The ACLU injunction charges that the new law discriminates against out-of-state students, and that the residency requirements for a student are unfair.

The ACLU injunction will not be served for at least two weeks.

"We want to coordinate activities of these groups with the efforts of students in the Chapel Hill area," Mendel said. "We want to get the faculty and administration of this university involved, and then possibly start lobbying in Raleigh."

Mendel said the group is also in the process of circulating a questionnaire to out-of-state students. The questionnaire will try to find out what effects the bill has had on these students, and if any of them are eligible for N.C. residency.

"The administration seems to be rather pessimistic. They did a lot of lobbying against the bill, and it still passed. They don't see much hope of it being repealed, but we feel something can be done," Mendel said.

A meeting will be held tonight for all students interested in obtaining information about the recent out-of-state tuition hike, and to formulate possible action against the new law.

The installation of a sprinkler system at Polk Place has proved to be quite an obstacle course for pedestrians. So much, in fact, that the physical plant saw fit to put a traffic warning sign in front of the construction area. (Staff photo by John Gellman)
