

Chapel Hill food co-op formed

by Jessica Hanchar
Staff Writer

A food co-op has been formed in Chapel Hill to provide natural or organic foods and grocery items at wholesale prices.

The group called Chapel Hill Food Co-op, has 30 items on order for its members at savings of "at least 10 per cent of retail prices in the area."

"Anyone in the community can join as a 'buying unit,' whether the unit is one person, a family or a group of 15 people," said Charles Jeffress, an organizer and member.

There are presently 31 units in the co-op, consisting of about 80 people, and "it's growing every day," according to Jeffress.

"Market day" is every Thursday from 4 to 8 p.m. in the Baptist Student Union on Battle Lane. Members place their orders at that time and pay in advance for their items. Orders are picked up the following Thursday.

"There are two conditions of membership," said Jeffress. One is a $5 fee for overhead, shipping charges and other group expenses.

The other condition is a commitment to work for and contribute time toward the co-op's functioning. "Work consists of going to Durham every week to get the items, breaking down the individual orders, unpacking the cartons and doing other things necessary for the co-op to run smoothly," Jeffress said. "Members work about four hours a month."

Jeffress noted several advantages for co-op members. "One is that we buy in bulk at wholesale prices straight from distributors.

"Another advantage is that, according to tax laws, co-ops pay no sales taxes since the food is distributed, not sold, to its members," he said.

"We buy only those grocery items which allow members to save at least 10 per cent of retail prices. Members save substantially more than that on natural or organic foods," he continued.

Lists of items and prices are available to prospective members every Thursday.

Chapel Hill Food Co-op was formed this summer after five initial groups decided on its need. It received sponsorship from Suruban Partners of Durham, a foundation which provides money for community activities organization. The non-profit co-op is officially an industry of Suruban Partners.

'Most outstanding' chapter

DU wins fraternity award

The UNC Delta Upsilon (DU) chapter has won an international chapter award for the 11th consecutive year.

This year's award is a special honor. The DU chapter received the title of "Most Outstanding DU Chapter" in the United States and Canada.

The award was issued at the international convention of fraternities in late August. Approximately 300 delegates attended the meeting in De Kalb, Ill.

Awarded annually, the title was presented on the basis of chapter membership, scholarship, finances and chapter relations, including public relations, mixers, activities and communities relations.

Comprehensive quarterly reports sent in by various chapters provided the basis for judging.

The DUs also won the International Chapter Relations award for the second consecutive year. This award for best chapter relations includes chapter activity in the community, participation in Inter-Fraternity Council, and relations with the University and alumni.
