

Police, students work together - stop dorm theft

by Charles Jeffries
Staff Writer

The Chapel Hill Police, with the assistance of several students, arrested Ronald Lee Enoch, 18, of Rt. 1, Burlington and charged him with breaking and entering and larceny at Hinton-James dormitory late Wednesday night.

Enoch was observed for approximately 30 minutes by both students and police. He was observed walking in and out of suites and one witness said "he looked into several young ladies' rooms."

James resident Harry Jones, 21, said he returned from Durham about 11:30 p.m. and spotted Enoch leaving the bathroom in his (Jones') suite.

"I got suspicious because he just spoke and kept on walking and I didn't know him. I later asked several students to help me follow him and asked Charles Miller, dorm governor, to call the police," Jones said.

When the police arrived, Jones asked them to watch the suspect. Witnesses said the activity alerted Enoch, who ran into a seventh floor suite. Charles Slade, assistant resident director, held the door to the suite until the police arrived.

After the suspect was handcuffed and informed of his rights, Jones then led the police and the suspect to a bush where seven pairs of pants were hidden.

Arresting officers Arnold Gold and Wilbur Simmons were forced to chase Enoch when he bolted after seeing the clothing.

Spokesmen said the arrest of Enoch tops off a two-week investigation by dormitory personnel concerned about an alarming number of thefts in James since fall semester started.

Sandy Ward, resident director, said, "We have been plagued by thefts of clothes, wallets and watches, and many of the girls have been unexpectedly visited on certain nights."

Enoch is a sophomore at North Carolina Central University in Durham. He is being held in the Chapel Hill jail in lieu of $500 bond.

UNC fraternities hold Open House

All 28 UNC fraternities will have open house from 2-6 p.m. Sunday.

The purpose of open house is to provide a period of discussions to inform students about particular fraternities.

Inter-fraternity Council (IFC) Rush Chairman Bill Griffin said the council is re-evaluating its position and programs, and wants to help promote fraternities.

"Since fraternities have so often been termed inaccessible, open house is an attempt to show the willingness of the individual fraternities and of the system to have open contact with the campus community," he said.

Griffin encourages all interested students to attend open houses, whether or not they are interested in pledging.

"The main objective of open house is to help new students become accustomed to fraternity life earlier in the semester so they can make a qualified decision on whether they want to go through rush," he said.

In its program revision, IFC is emphasizing fraternities are involved in all types of campus activities and projects.

According to Lt. Lindy Pendergrass, approximately one ounce of marijuana and paraphernalia for smoking were found at Edwards' place of residence during a police search Tuesday night.
