NCSL to continue applicant interviews

Interviews for the N.C. Student Legislature (NCSL) will continue through Monday and Tuesday, according to Lee Hood Capps, chairman of the UNC delegation. The interviews will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in Room 251 of the Student Union. Application forms are available at the Student Union Information Desk.

Capps also announced that an Interim Council meeting will be held at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the Raleigh City Club located in the Sir Walter Raleigh Hotel. He invited all students interested in being members of this year's NCSL delegation to attend.

The 35th session of NCSL will meet at the Raleigh Holiday Inn Mar. 15-18.

The Selection Committee, consisting of Capps, Richard Robertson, Randy Wolfe and Lacy Presnell, will notify students of their selection by Thursday, Feb. 17. Capps and Presnell were appointed to the committee by Student Body President Joe Stallings; Robertson and Wolfe were appointed by Student Legislature.

Capps said as soon as delegates are chosen, work will begin on researching and developing the bill which the UNC delegation will present.

He added that a sub-group will research and develop amendments for bills to be introduced by other universities or defenses against them.

At last year's session of NCSL, Lacy Presnell was selected as Best Speaker and Janis Bickett was elected secretary of NCSL.

Our late show audience acclaimed this a beautiful artistic movie.

Holshouser hasn't lost yet

by Pam Phillips
Staff Writer

Jim Holshouser, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, told an audience of student leaders at Granville Towers Wednesday night he hasn't lost an election yet and he hopes he won't start this spring.

Holshouser, a native of Boone, has served four terms in the General Assembly and five years as state party chairman. He considers himself "a statesman instead of a politician."

Holshouser realizes the youthfulness of the N.C. Republican party and that as governor he would have to contend with a Democratic General Assembly.

"You can't have a shoot-out at the OK corral between the Legislature and the governor's mansion every morning," he said.

Replacing educational credibility is one of Holshouser's main aims. He believes it is hard to justify the advantages of forced busing, yet "there is not a blasted thing that the governor of North Carolina can do about it."

Holshouser would also like to attract industry to the state to widen the tax base and help the unemployed.

"The governor should take a personal lead in seeking out industry," Holshouser said. "Yet he should make industry understand that North Carolina is not a haven for low-paying businesses which have been run out of other states because of anti-pollution laws."

Another Holshouser priority is penal reform. He said there are far too many repeaters in N.C. prisons, probably because of inadequate vocational rehabilitation. He recommends counseling in prisons.

Disclaiming he was for "coddling criminals," Holshouser said courts have too many cases in backlog and too often a suspect who is unable to post bail is languished in jail for months. He favors the right for a speedy, impartial trial.

An ardent opponent of commodity taxes, Holshouser dislikes the tobacco and soft drink taxes. He said he opposed any tax on one industry because it unfairly discriminated against the industry. He also said an additional tobacco tax would have repercussions outside the bounds of North Carolina which could affect the industry.

Holshouser played an active role in the restructuring of the N.C. university system. He thinks the compromise will be better for all because it will inhibit the factionalism which occurred when legislators were competing for schools funds in their districts.

"The Legislature is going to have to let the board alone to function," Holshouser said. "Like all humans they will make mistakes."

Holshouser thinks the Board of Governors possesses "a tremendous opportunity."

When asked by a student about the killing of a farm worker in Pitt County, Holshouser said, "When you are paying a man $400 a month, you are asking for much of the average law enforcement officer to behave as you would like."

Holshouser believes police respect can be restored by a training academy supported by the state and increased salaries among the force.

Lack of medical care in sparsely populated areas is another N.C. problem, Holshouser said, but he sees no clear solution in the future.

News in brief

Governors meet, tour N.C. State

RALEIGH—Gov. Bob Scott Friday called on a committee of the UNC Board of Governors to come up with more recommendations for the Head of the restructured higher education system.

Scott made the remarks at the second meeting of the 32-member panel, noting that the personnel selection committee had come up with only five nominations, including Dr. William C. Friday, president of the current Consolidated University system which will be phased out in July.

An informal poll of the panel, one which Consolidated University representatives hold 16 of the 31 votes, showed last month that most members, if not actually strongly for Friday's selection, were leaning in that direction.

Scott confirmed at Friday's meeting here that Friday's name was among the nominations made thus far. He declined to identify the others and said he was "surprised and disappointed" at the small number of nominations.

A decision on who will head the system as well as where its headquarters are to be located is not expected for at least another month or two.

enable his body to be flown home. Owino Opeyo, his brother, will accompany the body home.

Many of Opeyo's fellow African students contributed about $150 and wish to express their gratitude for the contributions of the American students.

The Kenya Embassy is sending a representative to attend the services. It has been announced by his brother that a library will be erected in Kenya in memory of Opeyo, who sent many books back to his homeland.

IFC to collect blood in drive

The Inter Fraternity Council will sponsor the American Red Cross Bloodmobile Drive February 23-24 at the University Methodist Church. George McAulay, a member of Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, said Tuesday. The Bloodmobile will be open from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. each day to accept donations.

Zeta Beta Tau is coordinating the drive which hopes to reach a goal of between 400 and 600 pints. Fraternities and sororities will be participating together in this effort, but anyone on campus who wishes to aid in reaching this goal is urged to donate.

Local merchants are donating cookies and other food for a canteen which will be set up for everyone giving blood.

There are also plans to award a prize to the fraternity or sorority donating the most blood.

Funeral today for UNC student

Funeral services for Orondo Opeyo, 28, a UNC graduate student from Kenya who died Wednesday after a short illness at N.C. Memorial Hospital, will be held today at 4 p.m. at the Chapel of the Cross Episcopal Church.

Opeyo had been a graduate student in the Department of Linguistics since the fall of 1969 and received his master's degree in 1971. He was working on his doctorate at the time of his death.

He taught Swahili at UNC for two and a half years and was also teaching, on loan, at Duke. His home was Muranga, Kenya.

American friends and students have contributed about $2,000, which will

Law school group wants more female recruitment

by Ann Berman
Staff Writer

The UNC Women of Law elected Joyce Davis and Diane Pradka co-chairmen from the first-year law students and Reita Dutton and Joan Stallings co-chairmen from the second-year students at its organizational meeting this week.

The main objectives of the Women of Law are recruitment and placement of women into the law school.

The group plans to sponsor speakers such as women lawyers, judges and faculty members interested in the organization.

Membership in the organization is open to men as well as women. Two goals of the Women of Law are to educate the entire student body to the problems of discrimination because of sex and to increase the stature of the law school in the South and across the nation.

There are 62 women in the School of Law, which has an enrollment of 715 students.

The organization will begin its educational drive by distributing a Women's Newsletter to all women students in the law school. Diane Pradka, co-chairman of the group, said "the biggest thing we are fighting now is ignorance."

The organization further hopes to distribute proceedings of the conferences held for women law students in Chicago and Durham during the past year.

The Women of Law Friday asked for funds from the Student Bar Association for their proposed budget. The bar association voted unanimously to allocate the funds, but the decision must still pass through procedural methods.

The organization still needs additional funds, however, to meet their objectives.

The Women of Law hopes a seminar will be started as soon as possible on women and the law and encourages all women law students to participate in the organization.
