Scott: 'use the system'

Governor Bob Scott told an NAACP youth conference here Saturday that young people must work within the political system to make it better.

Scott's speech was part of a two-day program on youth participation in the political process. About 500 students arrived on campus Friday for the conference.

"Politics is simply a force that powers the machinery that provides for those needs and aspirations of the people," Scott said. "By our involvement and ballots we determine the shape of that force."

Scott urged young people to renew their support of the basic processes controlling public affairs.

"It would be folly to throw up our hands and write our problems off as insoluble," he said. "The best course, the only feasible course, is to work within the system."

Scott said young people have gained a louder voice in politics through newly-granted voting rights and modern times, but some youths have become disenchanted with the political system.

"I would not detract one whit from the idealism that motivates such disillusionment," he said. "But I do submit that, for all our weaknesses and shortcomings, we have the right idea."

Scott was one of three conference speakers. Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles, Democratic candidate for governor, and Clarence Mitchell, director of the NAACP

Washington bureau, spoke Friday.

Students at the conference came from North Carolina high schools, community colleges and junior high schools. They met with state officials and politicians at informal workshop sessions.

Kelly Alexander, Jr., youth conference director, said the program's purpose was to give young people some ideas on getting into the political structure.

"Nobody has gotten this large a group of youths together and confronted them with as many politicians," Alexander said. "I think the young people here have started to learn how to distinguish between the candidates."

In answer to a program questionnaire, most students said they were not registered to vote, would participate in voter registration drives and would join the Democratic Party.

Few students listed a preferred candidate for governor, but many said they supported Shirley Chisholm, George McGovern and Julian Bond as presidential candidates.

Cobb criticizes traffic committee

Student Transportation Commissioner Bailey Cobb Friday became the second member of the University Traffic and Safety Committee to speak out against its policies.

Student Government representative Robert Wilson earlier last week contested the administration's handling of a proposal to build two multi-level parking garages on campus.

Cobb denounced the policy of secrecy which the Traffic and Safety Committee has maintained, saying "They have nothing to hide."

"As representatives of the students, we should be able to talk to them about their complaints and what they would like to see done in the way of transportation," he said.

Cobb also questioned whether there is any need for the committee at all.

"The meetings are supposed to be a forum for discussion between faculty and students, but it is really rather farcical because nobody knows what they are talking about," he said.

He also thinks members should be able to come in and present arguments for their position. However, Cobb said they had no knowledge beforehand of what was to be discussed. "We are given too short a notice before the meetings to be able to do any research, or to prepare anything which would add to the meeting," Cobb said.

As Cobb said he understood it, Wilson wrote to Chancellor N. Ferebee Taylor, who then wrote to Allen Waters, UNC director of operations and engineering, and told him to hold the Tuesday meeting. If the meeting had not been called, the proposals probably would have gone through without the committee's knowledge, Cobb said.

The discussion at the meeting centered around the proposal to build the two multi-level parking decks, one to be located in the Bell Tower Parking Lot and the other south of Manning Drive. "There was only one proposal for the two garages presented to the committee. We did not get to see any others." He agreed with Wilson that the committee only served as a "rubber stamp."

"I'm sure Mr. Waters and Chancellor Taylor want what is best for the University," Cobb said. "If they are not aware of how the 19,000 students and faculty members feel, it could be a bit of a hindrance to them in reaching a decision. The University is the people. They are inseparable and hopefully will continue to be so."

Morehead College may decentralize

by Kathy Koch
Staff Writer

Morehead Residence College is in the midst of drafting a revision of their present constitution as a panacea for what ails the college.

Cobb Dormitory Senator Thea Howard introduced a bill at Senate meeting last week calling for a decentralization of the college in a manner similar to the action taken by Scott College earlier.

Morehead Governor Jim Wellons said the action is an answer to the changing needs of the residents. "Individual dorms are more active now, and they want more money," he said. "This measure will strip the college down to the bare essentials, maintaining our representation in RCF, the use of the Cobb cellar by the college, and the use of the college's office equipment."

According to the bill, the residence college will receive 50 cents from each member instead of the $2 received now. The money would be appropriated for office maintenance and telephone usage. Representation in the senate would be changed to two from each of the five men's dorms (Aycock, Everett, Graham, Lewis and Stacey), including the dorm president and either vice president or social chairman. In addition, Cobb would send six representatives-at-large to compensate for the difference in the male and female population of the college.

The proposal, which described the present Morehead framework as outmoded and unviable, passed by an 18-0 vote with one abstention.

One of the main points of discussion was the usage of the Cobb cellar. Walter Holt, senator from Aycock, said, "We have to take into account that any other organization could petition to use the cellar. Without a residence college the Cellar would go back to the University."

Allen Reep, governor from newly-decentralized Scott Residence College, spoke to the senators and answered questions about how Scott is handling restructuring.

The bill has been sent to a presidential committee for rewriting to be introduced to the senate next week. If approved by the senate the following week, it will be put to a student referendum 15 days later.
