

Student Government to offer Evelyn Wood Reading Course

by Karen Pusey Staff Writer

Student Government will offer the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Course to UNC students, faculty and staff at greatly reduced rates, according to Student Body President Joe Stallings.

Monday in room 215, Student Union and 7-8 p.m. Wednesday in rooms 217 and 219. Regular lessons will begin the week of March 1.

According to Stallings, Student Government was able to arrange the reduced rates because the Wood School anticipates more people will take the course if it comes on campus. Similar programs have been held at Duke, Davidson and Queens College.

The normal price for the reading course is $225 per person for eight weeks. Each weekly session lasts two and one-half hours.

Prices for the course at the Union will vary with the number of persons who sign up. For example, if 20 students sign up, it will cost them $125 each; if 30-60 take the course, it will cost $100 per person; if more than 60 attend, each will pay $85.

Stephanie Bolick, special assistant to Stallings, said she anticipates about 60 to participate. Bolick is handling the administrative procedures for the course.

"Each class is designed for 30 students," she said. "We now have two separate classes scheduled. If less sign up, we will have to consolidate."

Bolick said anyone interested in the course should sign up at the Union Desk before March 1. Those people will be contacted before the first regular lesson so they will know how much to expect to pay. The entire amount must be paid at the first meeting. Checks and credit cards are acceptable, she said.

Townpeople will also be allowed to take the course, but must pay $150 per person, no matter how many sign up.

Regular lessons will be held beginning March 1 from 5:30 to 8 p.m. and from 8 to 10 p.m. in room 207-209 in the Union.

Stallings said Student Government decided to try sponsoring the program because many people were interested in the course even at the $225 rate. "We thought we could help them and give students an advantage at the same time," he said.

Aldermen will consider recycling and canines

Dog control and newspaper recycling are among the issues to be considered by the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen today at 4 p.m.

Dog Warden Gus Shoffner will report on the progress of the dog control program and present his program and budget needs for the next fiscal year. The report will be the aldermen's first look at the success of the dog control program since the dog pound opened last November.

Shoffner will also discuss a proposed dog control ordinance which charges a dog owner with the responsibility for the actions of his dog.

The aldermen will also be asked to begin piloting a newspaper recycling program by the Mayor's Task Force on Recycling. If approved, Chapel Hill would become one of the first towns in the state with such a program.

The task force has proposed a collection system providing four bulk containers to be located at East Franklin, Glen Lennox and Carrboro fire stations.

Other action Monday includes:

- A meeting between the board and members of the Research Triangle Planning Commission to discuss the commission's program as it concerns Chapel Hill and to present a recently completed economic study of the area.

- Approval of a pool and beer license for Norton Kurlan, who plans to open a discotheque in Eastgate.

- Consideration of using bank services for preparation of the town payroll.

- Discussion of street improvements and sidewalks for Airport Road at Hillsborough Street.

- Recommendation from the Planning Board that the town become involved in the University's plans for parking decks.

New Doris Betts novel out April 24 in N.C.

Joe Patton New N.C. Novel Feb. 14, 1972

"The River to Pickle Beach," a new novel by Doris Betts set in North Carolina, will appear in Tar Heel bookstores April 24, two weeks before its national release.

The novel mirrors the 1968 deaths of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy in a parallel double murder in this state.

"There is no real Pickle Beach," says the author. The setting of the title, an imaginary strip of coastline below Southport, is nicknamed for the "rank pickerelweed growing in the marshes there."

Mrs. Betts, twice awarded the Sir Walter Raleigh Award for fiction, currently teaches creative writing at UNC. "The River to Pickle Beach," published by Harper and Row, follows the author's earlier success of "The Scarlet Thread." Mrs. Betts is now at work on a fourth novel which begins in the mountains of North Carolina.

Teenagers find missing THC

Teenagers conducting a local clean-up drive Saturday discovered at least part of a dangerous marijuana ingredient missing from the UNC Medical School.

Authorities said the portion of THC (tetrahydrocannabinol) had been hidden on a creek bank in a brown paper bag.

Officers said the bag contained bottles, syringes, hypodermic needles and smoking pipes. Nearby, the officers said, were broken bottles and laboratory vials, indicating some of the drug may have been used.

Dr. Louis S. Harris, a University pharmacologist, said the amount of the drug recovered hopefully would be determined by an analysis he plans to conduct today.

The drug, an active ingredient in marijuana which could prove fatal if injected in humans, was discovered missing from a locked refrigerator at the school last week.

Harris had been conducting experiments on the drug's effect on animals.

Grad student plans talk on China trip

Phan Chanh, a UNC graduate student in political science, will speak Monday about the President's trip to Peking and its relation to the Vietnam war.

Chanh will hold the open meeting in room 217 of the Student Union at noon. The discussion has been titled: "From Peace Offer to Peking Trip: A Nixon Dilemma."

According to Chanh, part of Nixon's purpose in going to Peking is to get the Chinese to agree not to intervene militarily in Vietnam. Chanh said this is necessary because the U.S. may have to resort to drastic measures if a major Communist offensive is launched during the U.S. presidential election.

Chanh will also attempt to show that Nixon is prolonging the war, not ending it. He said he will probably also touch on China's emerging role as the third superpower. Chanh's presentation will be followed by a question and answer session.
