SOPHOMORES—GRADUATE STUDENTS

The United States Army offers college men the opportunity to be commissioned as second lieutenants after only two years of on-campus ROTC instruction. You can take advantage of this opportunity by attending a six-week ROTC Basic Camp after your sophomore year and completing the ROTC advanced Course in your junior and senior years.

The two-year program is designed specifically to fill the needs of junior college graduates and students of four-year colleges who have not taken ROTC during their first two years.

Students who plan to earn a baccalaureate degree at one of the colleges offering ROTC Advanced Courses may qualify for commissions by completing the two-year program at that school. The student at a four-year college which does not offer ROTC may be able to enroll in the program at a neighboring institution where such instruction is available.

A six-week Basic Camp substitutes for the first two years of the four-year program. Except for this, the two programs are the same.

Applications can be accepted for the Two Year Program until March 22, 1972
