

News in brief

Interviews slated for committees

Interviews for positions on the Chancellor's Advisory Committees will be held today through Friday, from 2 to 5 p.m. in Suite C of the Student Union. Interested applicants are urged to sign up for an appointment.

The committees which have positions are as follows: Building and Grounds - controls development of the campus and looks after the location and appearance of buildings; Calendar - sets up the University's calendar; Established Lecturer - considers all people who may be invited to speak before the student body; Facilities - considers the allocation of different campus facilities to different on-campus groups.

Other committees with available positions are the Status of Minorities and Disadvantaged Students Committee, which studies how to place more qualified minority faculty on the staff and studies how to erase prejudice; the Student Stores Committee, which studies various aspects of the Student Stores; the Traffic and Safety Committee, which plans parking regulations and considers transportation facilities; the Scholarship and Student Aid Committee, which establishes the criteria for administering and rescinding scholarships.

Another committee is the Committee on Residential Life (CURL) which studies the social, educational and practical aspects of residential living. Other committees are the Student Health Services Committee, which works with the director of the Student Health Services and helps determine all policies and innovations in the service; the Space Committee, which allocates space in on-campus buildings; and the University Day Committee, which plans University Day activities.

For more information students can call 929-1893 or 933-5202.

Invitations set for distribution

Pre-paid commencement invitations will be distributed today from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the South Gallery meeting room of the Student Union.

Loose invitations will also be sold on a first-come, first-served basis to those students who missed the invitation sales.

said Charlie Miller, president of the Order of the Grail.

Invitations cost 21 cents each. A small number of souvenir invitation covers will also be on sale for 80 cents each, Miller said.

All profits from the invitation sales will go to the Bernard-Grail Scholarship Fund, which distributes several scholarships to UNC students on a need basis.

Miller emphasized this is the last chance for students to purchase invitations.

Galifianakis sets speech today

Representative Nick Galifianakis (D-N.C.), who is running for the U.S. Senate, will speak in The Pit today at 11:30 a.m. Following the speech will be a brief question and answer period.

Galifianakis will be talking to students and sampling opinions while on the UNC campus.

WUNC series sets schedule

Gubernatorial candidates Arlis Pettyjohn and Jim Holshouser will be guests on UNC television's "Candidates '72" series this week.

State American Independent Party chairman Pettyjohn will be on at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and Republican state representative Holshouser at 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Other candidates scheduled for this week's program are William H. Boone, Republican candidate for U.S. Senate, Monday at 8:30 p.m. and Roy G. Sowers, Jr., Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. Following each "Candidates '72" feature, there will be a half hour news conference.

Grads to fast in war protest

A group of UNC graduate students will begin a vigil and fast today to dramatize the different life styles of Chapel Hill and Vietnam.

The fast will begin at 9 a.m. around the flagpole in Polk Place.

The students will be eating only two small bowls of rice a day, the ration Vietnamese refugees in refugee camps receive, according to Al Hayes, one of the grad students.

The students are asking others to join them in the vigil and fast, which will continue 24 hours a day for up to a week. "We'd like for them to join us for as long as they can," said Hayes, "even if it's just for our noon meal, or just to sit and talk with us."

Hayes said the students will be talking about the Vietnam war and informing people of their views.

Photographer wins competition

Daily Tar Heel photographer Johnny Lindahl was named Student Southern Photographer of the Year Saturday by the 23rd annual Southern Short Course in News Photography.

Lindahl's portfolio of 20 photographs was chosen as the best of the entrants in the student portfolio division.

The award brings a silver engraved plate and a new camera and lens.

Photographers in the competition came from as far away as Florida and Texas.

The contest and course was sponsored by the UNC Extension Division.

Three dorms still have space

Only three dorms are still open for continuing students following Phases I, II and III of residence hall signups last week.

No spaces are left for men students. Women students have the choice of James, Ehringhaus or two spaces in Cobb dorms.

Continuing students who want rooms and are closed out of their desired rooms may have their names placed on a waiting list in the Housing Assignments Office, Bynum Hall. As cancellations are received, the waiting list names will be assigned rooms.

Summer school sign up for students living in Parker, Connor, Joyner, Teague, Alexander, Everett and Lewis will be held Wednesday through Friday.

All other students should sign up May 1-12.

Only the above dorms will be open for summer school students.

GPSF to hear Coleman tonight

A.B. "Lonny" Coleman, candidate for N.C. State Senate from Orange County, will speak at the Graduate and Professional Student Federation (GPSF) Senate meeting today at 8 p.m. in the Student Union.

Coleman has declared himself against the out-of-state tuition hike and supports a strong graduate program at UNC.

According to Jim Becker, presiding officer of the GPSF Senate, graduate departments which want student funds should request these funds through the GPSF.

Cheerleader wins top award

UNC junior Becky Fuller was named Miss Cheerleader USA Sunday in competition at Cypress Gardens, Florida.

She was selected from 12 finalists chosen by the judges out of a total of 200 entries from colleges and universities across the country.

Her award includes a $1,000 scholarship from the Pepsi Cola Co.

Last week, she was named National Cheerleader of the Year, in a separate contest.

Two suspended for bomb threat

Two students involved in a campus bomb threat case were found guilty by Honor Court at its Wednesday night session.

The court handed down a sentence of definite suspension for two semesters, effective until Dec. 22, 1972.

The students, who called in the threat on Carroll Hall to campus police from their dormitory room, appeared before the court on both honor and campus code offenses.

The call was traced to the students' room telephone after a campus police secretary alerted the Chapel Hill Telephone Co.

The students, who had tests scheduled in Carroll Hall, were also charged with cutting the telephone wires in an attempt to shut off the connection.

According to Reid James, student attorney general, both the bomb threat and wire-cutting charges were in violation of state statutes, and, as such, subject to criminal court prosecution.

James said the Carroll Hall case could have been legally pressed by the University or the city but was not.

Freda Cobb, Women's Honor Court chairman, said the court felt the bomb threat a very serious offense "which impaired the welfare and educational opportunities of a great number of students."

"Due to information brought out by character statements on the students and the circumstances surrounding the incident, the court felt a penalty of two-semester definite suspension was sufficient," Cobb added.

Men's Honor Court Chairman Doug Reynolds, implicating the seriousness of the matter, said the Carroll Hall case is the first one involving a bomb threat to be heard by the court.

James said the case decision is of particular importance at exam time, when a rash of bomb threats usually occurs.
