

Clark Gable, Marilyn Monroe, and Montgomery Clift in "The Misfits"

Three days of Marilyn 'M.M.' filmfest slated

by Joe Patton
Feature Writer

"Whether they said M.M. or merely Monroe, you knew they were talking about the one and only Marilyn."

-Advertising notes for Twentieth Century-Fox
"Marilyn" (1963)

Marilyn Monroe becomes the first star to receive the Carolina Union filmfest treatment this season. The three-day Marilyn Monroe Festival - showcasing "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," "Marilyn," "Some Like It Hot," and "The Misfits" - starts Monday.

Marilyn the comedienne spices the cute-funny antics of Monday night's "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" with her distinctive innocent charm. Jean Negulesco ("Three Coins in the Fountain") directed and Nunnally Johnson scripted the fun affair filmed in 1953 - the time when M.M. was leaving the supporting roles behind and becoming a star. "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" comes packaged with "Monroe," a 1963 documentary chronicling her movie life at 20th Century-Fox and including choice cuts from her Fox flicks.

Tuesday's "Some Like It Hot" emerges as a wham-bang of a comedy directed by Billy Wilder who missed with his recent "Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" but hit the comedy goldmine with "The Fortune Cookie" and "The Apartment." Jack Lemmon and Tony Curtis haven't a chance to make it as girls in drag when they're competing with Marilyn. The chase takes the stars from the Northern gangsterlands to the sunny Florida shores. Everyone has a grand time dodging too many bullets or too many laughs.

"The Misfits," the best of the best entries, proves a strong film that treats the "Wild Bunch" theme of Americans entering a new age with taut restraint and a rare display of visual power. Master John Huston guided threesome Clark Gable, Montgomery Clift and Monroe to amazing heights of ensemble acting. At its best when dealing with the fading of an individual's era and the compromises modern life imposes, "The Misfits" is very much on target. The final mustang sequence you will not forget. Monroe's husband Arthur Miller ("After the Fall") provided a magnificent script. Monroe gave her best performance in this, her last film.

All performances of the Union-sponsored filmfest will be held nightly at 6:30 & 9 p.m. in Great Hall. Admission to each film is $5.00. Tickets may be purchased at the Union Information Desk.

News in brief Scott to speak here

Gov. Bob Scott and the Institute of Government at UNC are cosponsors of a "Higher Education Conference" which will be held here Friday, Sept. 22.

The principal speaker, Eugene C. Lee, former vice president of the University of California at Berkeley and now director of the Institute of Governmental Studies there, will address the conference at 2 p.m. at the Carolina Inn, following a luncheon.

Lee is coauthor of a book on the multi-campus university in which UNC is one of nine large universities reviewed in the Carnegie Commission study. The book contains a commentary by UNC President William C. Friday, who will introduce the speaker.

Gov. Scott and John L. Sanders, director of the Institute of Government, will present opening remarks at the morning session. Victor S. Bryant, of the UNC Board of Governors, and Sanders will give analyses of the UNC code and the Act of Reorganizing Institutions of Higher Education. A question and answer period follows at 10:45 a.m.

At 11:45, W. Earl Britt, also of the UNC Board of Governors, will discuss the "Delegation of Authority to Institutional Boards."

"How to Make the New System Work" is the topic for a roundtable discussion at 11:45 a.m. with William A. Dees Jr., vice chairman of the Board of Governors, as moderator. The panel includes Hugh Daniel Jr. and William A. Johnson, both members of the Board of Governors; John R. Larkins, N.C. Central University trustee; and Addison H. Reese, UNC-Charlotte trustee.

ACTION sets recruiting here

Representatives of ACTION, which includes Peace Corps and Vista, will be on campus next week to recruit volunteers and distribute information about their agencies.

Information booths will be set up in Y Court and outside the Student Union from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The recruiters are anxious to talk to seniors, according to Jim Crowder, a former Peace Corps volunteer who is now working for ACTION.

The Peace Corps sponsors more than 500 programs in 57 countries, and Vista operates projects in 49 states and four territories, Crowder said.

Both agencies have possible openings in many fields, he added.

"We're particularly interested in people with specific skills or trades such as architects, business majors, nurses, and math and science teachers," he explained. "We have programs in almost every field."

The Peace Corps is initiating an intern program which combines the standard two years of volunteer work with six months of study at a U.S. university, Crowder said.

Participants in the intern program receive a master's degree in their fields as well as tuition, books and a living allowance while they are in school, he said.

"There are several intern programs in existence now and at least 10 more are planned for next fall in the Southern area," Crowder said.

The ACTION agency will accept any applicant who is a United States citizen if he is at least 18 years old and if he has a "viable and needed" skill, Crowder said.

Baker elected GPSF president

Dick Baker was elected president of the Graduate and Professional Student Federation (GPSF) at its meeting Tuesday night.

Bill Snodgrass is the newly-elected presiding officer of the GPSF senate, and the vice president is former presiding officer Jim Becker.

The new members of the executive board are Bill Smith, John Saxon, Sue Ross, Keith Hackney, and Jeff Grady. The new committee chairmen are Jim Lott, financial committee; Jarvis Sinclair, rules committee; and incumbent Sam Masaracha, judicial committee.

In GPSF budgetary matters, the executive board reported to the senate that a budget of approximately $18,000 had been submitted to Student Legislature (SL) of which approximately two-thirds is planned to go to separate departmental budgets within the graduate school.

"We are figuring this on the basis of a budget for each department of $2 per person in the department," said Becker. "We have asked each department to plan its budget requests on this basis."

Social, service sororities rush

Approximately 110 girls received invitations Friday afternoon to pledge one of the nine social sororities on campus.

Another sorority, Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority, begins its rush Sunday.

Social sororities began informal rush Friday at 5 p.m. In contrast to formal rush and structured parties, informal rush is carried on separately by each sorority, such as invitations to dinner or sorority activities.

Any girl interested in signing up for informal rush should see Julie Jones in OI Steele Building.

GSS rush will be Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Frank Porter Graham lounge of the Student Union and Tuesday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the basement of Conner Dorm.

All women students, including freshmen, are invited to join GSS, which first came to UNC in 1970.

GSS activities including working with Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity in the annual Campus Chest Fund drive, and Campus Chest Carnival.

"Our national project this year is public health," said Sandra Fowler, president. "We will probably be doing some volunteer work at North Carolina Memorial Hospital and are tentatively planning a project to raise money for UNICEF again."

Violations charged

United Press International

Raleigh - The campaign manager for Republican Senate nominee Jesse Helms Friday accused the Democratic nominee of "evident infractions of both state and federal statutes" by not reporting contributions in the form of aircraft transportation.

Thomas F. Ellis, Helms' campaign manager, said he had written State Atty. Gen. Robert Morgan and U.S. Atty. Gen.

Richard G. Kleindienst asking for an investigation of alleged violations on the part of Rep. Nick Galifianakis, Helms' opponent, and the corporations which owned the planes.

Lance Brisson, an aide to Galifianakis, said the charges were "an attempt to throw up a smoke screen" around Helms' own campaign problems.

Ellis said there were two instances of possible law violations.

The first, he said, occurred July 31 when Galifianakis flew to a sheriff's convention in Asheville in a plane owned by the Baldwin Department Store of Durham. The second incident was Aug. 19, when Galifianakis flew to Roanoke Rapids using a plane owned by Food Line Inc. of Asheville, a company primarily owned by Galifianakis' campaign manager, Russell Walker.

Quoting an account in Friday's Greensboro Daily News, Ellis said Frank Baldwin of Rocky Mount, part owner of the department store, had provided the corporation plane as his own contribution to Galifianakis and paid the corporation for the cost.

"Yet, there is no record of any contribution in kind or otherwise to Mr. Galifianakis from any member of the Baldwin family," Ellis said.

In the other case, Ellis said there were no figures available for use of the plane on Galifianakis' record of campaign contributions or expenses filed Sept. 10.
