

Athletic pass a privilege card

by Robert Ely
Feature Writer

Why is it that student athletic passes are not transferable? It seems that since we have paid for tickets to see a game we should be allowed to give them away if we can not attend.

Your gripe sounds legitimate and probably arises from thinking of the athletic pass as a ticket. Homer Rice, athletic director, told Wiretap that the pass should "not be construed as a ticket." Your athletic fee pays for your membership in the UNC Athletic Association. As a member, you are entitled to use the facilities in Woollen Gym and the Tin Can, the tennis courts, the various intramural fields and the track at Fetzer Field. Membership also entitles one to admittance to all the football games and as Rice noted regretfully "the chance to stand in line for a basketball ticket."

The athletic fee is used for upkeep of these facilities. In addition it funds the University's 12 non-revenue sports and seven women's intercollegiate sports.

Rice pointed out that no part of the athletic fee funds football or basketball, the two major revenue sports. In this light, the athletic pass should not be considered a ticket. Football and basketball are funded entirely from gate receipts, television and radio.

"Students have choice seats," Rice said. If they give up their pass they could be depriving another student of a good seat. "It's also unfair to anybody who had to pay for a seat."

Making admission to athletic events a privilege covered by the fee also solved another problem, Rice said. In the past when tickets to the events were sold, those buzzards of the campus desert, the scalpers, found plenty of pockets on which to feed. Now they are not so much of a problem.

It should be noted that the athletic department receives no state funds. It is funded entirely by the student fee. The two revenue sports take care of themselves. Contributions are handled separately and are used only for scholarships.

I am a senior at UNC and formerly a candidate for Phi Beta Kappa. Much to my surprise and disappointment, however, I have discovered that the standards for induction have been raised to a 3.5 (discounting required P.E.) after 105 semester hours. The standards seem to have been changed this past summer, one semester before seniors who had the necessary 3.3 were to be inducted.

The change should certainly affect the present senior class. It seems only fair to begin with the freshman class. Also, members of the present senior class eligible last fall were inducted under the old system. What, if anything, can be done to allow the affected seniors to receive what is rightfully theirs?

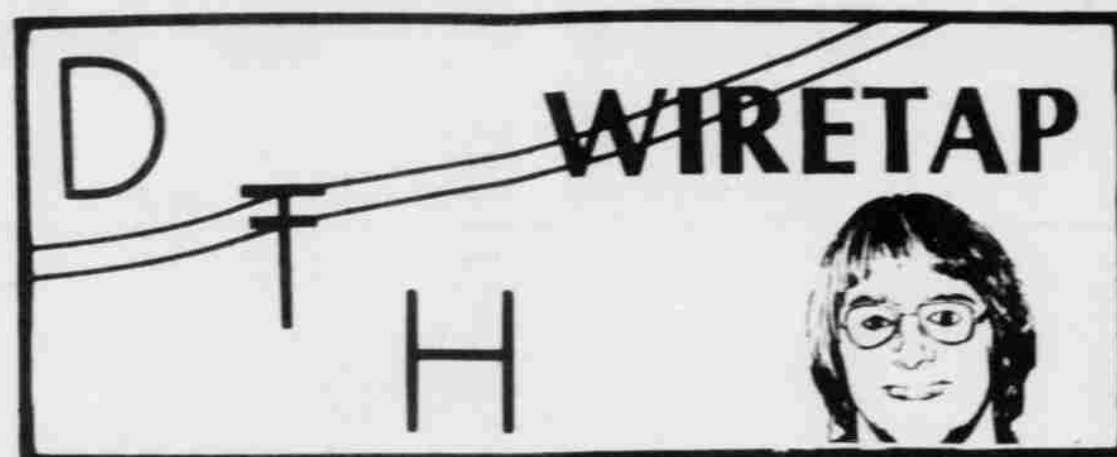

Those inducted into Phi Beta Kappa this semester will be eligible under the old system, according to Claude George, associate dean of the School of Business Administration and faculty advisor to Phi Beta Kappa. They will be eligible on the basis of work completed through last semester. Therefore, if after 105 semester hours your average is a 3.3 or better, you are probably eligible for induction.

Dean George said that there are other factors which could determine a person's eligibility. If you are a transfer student, this could be important. Also considered are any F's you received as a freshman. "It's very difficult to answer cleanly without knowing who the person is and their particular circumstances," he said.

Dean George said he had a computer print-out listing every student who is even close to eligibility for Phi Beta Kappa. He told Wiretap to urge you and any other students who may have questions about their eligibility to call him at 933-8301 or drop by his office, 100 Carrol Hall. He seems very receptive and willing to help. "Our objective is to take people into Phi Beta Kappa, not to keep people out," he said.

Seniors affected by the change will be those who manage a cumulative 3.3 average by the end of this present semester. Under the old system, they would become eligible and would be inducted next semester. Eligibility next semester however, requires a minimum cumulative Q.P.A. of 3.5.

There is probably little that can be done to allow those students affected by the change to be considered under the present system. The executive committee of the UNC chapter of Phi Beta Kappa examined their requirements last year. The committee, composed of students and faculty members, looked at the number of students being inducted and found it a higher percentage than what is nationally recommended.

In regard to raising the standards Dean George said, "We did not have to do it." The executive committee consulted with the national Phi Beta Kappa secretary and he suggested that the standards be raised. Dean George noted that the student members of the executive committee were much in favor of the change.

Standards for induction are a Q.P.A. of 3.6 after 75 semester hours and a 3.3 after 105 hours. They will be raised to a 3.7 and 3.5 respectively.

You suggested in your first column that you knew where to go with a dental problem if the clinic was booked. Well now I need the answer and I hope you weren't bluffing.

We were. If the screening clinic is booked up you might call the Dental Demonstration Practice (D.D.P.) at 966-1510. Kathy Moskalik, receptionist at the D.D.P., said anyone can come on a "fee for service basis."

How rapidly you can be seen depends on the problem. "If they're in pain," Moskalik said, "we'll try to get them in right away." For something routine like an examination or cleaning, it takes longer. A patient can generally be seen fairly quickly, she said.

The D.D.P. performs any services that a private dentist would. It is not a teaching clinic for dental students. Four dentists who have private practices work at the D.D.P. Routine oral surgery is performed, but if the problem is too complicated, you will be referred to a specialist.

The cost is "pretty much the same" as a private dentist would charge, according to Moskalik. Payment schedules that fit a patient's particular financial situation can readily be worked out.

The D.D.P. is a research project. It is designed to study public reaction to the use of Expanded Duty Auxiliaries in dental service. E.D.A.'s at the Practice perform some work formerly done by dentists, thus releasing the dentist to see more patients.

Correction: Last week, Wiretap outlined the procedure for obtaining minor dormitory room repairs (light bulbs, etc.) Some misunderstanding may have ensued from the explanation. If you need a repair, the correct procedure for reporting it is as follows. Tell your R.A. He will tell the residence director, who will in turn contact Russ Perry's office. Perry will get the physical plant on the job.

Also, concerning bicycle protection, do not park your bike by itself. Park it with others. Due to a misprint, last week's Wiretap said, "park your bike by itself." It's hardly worth correcting, but it keeps us honest.

Your questions to Wiretap can be mailed to The Daily Tar Heel or you can drop them by the office. You can also call 933-1012 on Monday, Wednesday or Friday between 2 and 4 p.m.

News in brief

Greek life style

Sorority and fraternity members will show slides and answer questions about Greek life in various dorms this week.

The purpose of the panel and slide show is to give people an idea of what fraternities and sororities do.

This week's schedule is as follows:

Today - 7 p.m. in Kenan dorm for the residents of Kenan, Whitehead, Alderman, McIver, Spencer, Carr, Old East and Old West; 9 p.m. in the downstairs lounge of Ehringhaus for James, Ehringhaus, and Morrison.

Wednesday - 7 p.m. in Parker dorm for Parker, Avery and Teague.

Thursday - 7 p.m. in Cobb for Morehead Residence College, Connor, Henderson Residence College, Joyner and Upper Quad dorms.

Lettuce petition

A petition to end the sale of non-union lettuce in the campus cafeterias will be put to the test this afternoon.

The petition, containing signatures of customers of the Pine Room and Chase Cafeteria, will be presented to Robert Greer of Servomation-Mathias.

Lettuce boycott workers gathered nearly 1,500 signatures during their five-day project. Of these, approximately 700 are meal contract holders, representing more than half of those on meal plans, according to boycott organizer Kath McGonigle.

'Women in Law'

"Women in Law" is the topic of a panel discussion at 6:45 p.m. today in the Student Union. The public is invited.

The panel of law students and faculty is being sponsored by the Association of Women Students.

Job recruitment

The UNC Placement Service has announced that the following organizations will recruit on campus during December:

Mon., Dec. 4 - University of Georgia School of Law; University of Rochester

Graduate School of Management; Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Tues. Dec. 5 - C.S. Lowrimore and Co.; Union Carbide Corporation - Consumer Products Division; Babson College (M.B.A. program); Education Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Mon., Dec. 11 - The Institute for Paralegal Training.

Tues. Dec. 12 - The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

SDX job meet

Sigma Delta Chi journalism fraternity is sponsoring a job seminar tonight at 7 p.m. in Howell Hall lounge.

Mac Seccrest and Ed Mullins, journalism professors, and Mildred Stout, representing the journalism school placement service, will be on the panel.

Other participants include Joe Doster, managing editor of the "Winston Salem Journal;" Mary Junk, marketing research director for Knight Publishing Company in Charlotte; and George Dusenbury, a representative from Carmichael Advertising Agency in Durham.

Yack deadlines

Friday is the last day to have pictures taken for the Yackety-Yack. Appointments can be made in Suite D of the Student Union from 1 to 5 p.m.

Students are asked not to call for appointments. There is no charge to have pictures made.

Friday will also be the last day that subscriptions for the Yack will be taken.
