

Bus runs scheduled for exams

The University administration has approved Student Government's (SG) request to extend South Campus bus service on a limited basis through the exam period.

According to SG representative Lee Corum, the regular bus service will end today and the new one will begin operation Monday morning.

Whether or not the service will be in operation throughout the entire exam period, however, depends on the use the service receives during the first week.

"It will take 1300 riders a day in order to keep the service running. If the service is discontinued in the middle of the week, it will be announced on WCAR radio," Corum said.

Corum said the service will be operating a bus on the South Campus loop from Chase cafeteria to Wilson library back to Chase, every ten minutes from 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.

Starting at 4:45, the bus will be leaving Chase for Franklin Street every fifteen minutes until 6:15.

All bus passes will be invalidated during this special period and all students will pay a fare of ten cents per ride. There will be no weekend bus service.

Bomb scare

Intricate precautions planned

by Kevin McCarthy
Staff Writer

Your alarm clock rings at 6 a.m., and you drag yourself out of bed to shut it off before it awakens your roommate. At first you wonder why you're arising so early in the morning because your first class isn't until 11. Ah, but then you remember you have an exam in that class, and you haven't even started studying yet. But your eyes are heavy with sleep, your mind groggy and your stomach upset from last night's beer blast. So, you weigh the possibility of returning to bed against the horrible prospect of studying. You stand in a daze considering the alternatives, then, suddenly, a brilliantly original idea pops into your brain—you will phone in a bomb threat. You reason that the building will surely be evacuated and the exam postponed. Fine.

You return to your cozy bed, resetting your alarm for 10. Your alarm rings on schedule. After pulling on some clothes, you walk to a public phone booth, nervously pick up the receiver and dial the campus police. Covering the phone with a thin towel, you say, "There is a bomb set to go off in an hour in Gardner Hall." For emphasis, you add, "This is no joke!" You quickly hang up and walk back to the dorm, trying not to think about getting caught.

some students have faced, or may yet face, the possibility of being unable to receive satisfactory course grades or even to graduate because of cancellation of the quizzes and examinations necessitated by evacuation of buildings."

The telephone lines into Campus Police headquarters are trapped, as are other lines into selective campus buildings, and your call is immediately being traced through the Chapel Hill Telephone Company.

In the past, most of the bomb threats have occurred around final exam time. Consequently, all preparations for that period are stepped up, and the police are particularly alert. Last year, two students from Winston dorm were caught and expelled from the University for a year for calling in a bomb threat on March 30, 1972. According to Gerald G. Warren, director of Security, "There were only two or three bomb threats made during final exams last spring after the incident."

"Nevertheless," Jones said in his Dec. 4 directive concerning bomb threat procedures, "it seems only prudent to renew for the coming examination period the arrangements which worked so well last May."

Back in your dorm room, you begin to wonder what the penalties are for calling in a bomb threat, just in case you do get caught. If the evidence is sufficient, those charged with making threatening phone calls may be prosecuted under North Carolina statutes, making this a criminal offense. Voice recordings made by special telephone equipment could be used as evidence. If found guilty, the bomb threat caller has committed a misdemeanor and is subject to two years imprisonment, fine or both. Furthermore, anyone who makes a false, misleading or unfounded report which interferes with the operation or performance of peace officers' duty is guilty, according to state law, of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed $500, imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

You settle back in a comfortable chair and await developments.

New restaurant set in NCNB plaza

Among the new businesses locating in the NCNB Plaza is a restaurant chain which promises to let its customers take part in making their own sandwiches.

"Blimpie's Base," a restaurant that specializes in submarine sandwiches, has become the first plaza shop to officially announce its opening. The New Jersey-based franchise will open Jan. 3.

Peter Zimring, a former UNC student and owner of the shop, says the restaurant will be arranged around a cafeteria serving line.

"The customer will enter 'Blimpie's' and order his sandwich," he explained. "Then he'll follow it down the line as we make it. He'll feel like he's making his own sandwich."

"Blimpie's" will offer 13 different sandwiches, dessert, ice cream, and beer. Prices for the sandwiches will range from 75 cents to $1.85.

Approximately 50 people can be accommodated in the restaurant, which is located on the Rosemary Street side of the plaza.

"Blimpie's" will have two glass fronts, a silver ceiling, and furniture painted in shades of orange, brown and yellow. It will be jointly owned and managed by Zimring, and Jerry Dolimer of Raleigh.

Hours will be 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. every day with campus delivery from 6 p.m. to 12 p.m.

It will be the first "Blimpie's" to locate in North Carolina. According to Zimring, after Jan. 3 the next closest one will be in Washington, D.C.

Transit plan confusing?

by Lynn Lloyd
Associate Editor

With a $427,400 bus system coming up for a vote in Chapel Hill on Feb. 6, questions are beginning to be asked as to how much it will cost the individual, how will it help that individual, and will it be any different from the last system that failed.

The Joint Public Transportation Commission has produced a transit plan for the community to vote on that has been revised time and again to meet the needs of the community. After three and one half years of work looking at minimal costs, providing availability of the system to as many areas as possible and learning from the mistakes that it made before, the commission is now offering a plan that it hopes will alleviate some of the traffic and parking congestion in Chapel Hill.

But the questions above will be asked anyway as the referendum approaches. Carboro was struck from the proposal after it refused to participate in the bus project. A lot of people appear to be confused about what the proposal says. The Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen set the voting date back by two weeks. And as Lee Corum once said, "We've been delayed and delayed and delayed, so it's kind of hard to get upset over another delay."

No matter what the setbacks have been, the transit proposal is just about ready and it's time that local citizens and students take a look at it to see what it has to say. The Chapel Hill-Carboro area has been suffering from parking and traffic problems for too long to overlook what the new proposal might have to offer.

News Analysis

The system will be running 14 buses total, with fewer buses working in the evening and during off-peak hours in some areas. One route will be "figure 8" from South Campus to North Campus back to Franklin Street.

Another route will run from Franklin Street to Eastgate and back; a third from Franklin to Eastgate to Glenwood then to town; a fourth route from Franklin to Lake Forest and back; a fifth route from Franklin to Colonial Heights; and a sixth route from town to Northside-Merritt Mill Road and back.

The buses will operate between the hours of 7 and 9 a.m. during week days, and between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Saturdays. They will provide town service 52 weeks per year. Three buses will run on campus from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. approximately 36 weeks per year, with one bus operating during the evening hours.

The base fare is 15 cents, and 10 cents for the on-campus "figure-8." Passes will be sold for $25 and quarterly passes for $8. Discounts will be offered for both passes. Children 12 and under will be able to ride for half price.

Revenues from "fare-paying passengers" and a federal grant, that the commission is hoping for, will cover most of the costs. But the first year operating deficit must be covered by an ad valorem tax.

The UNC Traffic and Parking Commission has been meeting to study a revision that has been made to the transit proposal that asks for the University to purchase bus passes and resell them to the students. Representatives from most elements on campus are working here on problem areas and the possibility of future fringe lots.

Little do you realize that the Campus Police have already set down a description of the quality of your voice, your sex and the manner in which the message was conveyed (Was the caller nervous?). You have set a whole series of events into motion. The threatened building is immediately evacuated until security officers have completed a thorough search for any sign of explosives.

According to Claiborne S. Jones, assistant to the chancellor, the result of your bomb threat or anyone's is "a serious interference with the instructional programs of the University as well as with other operations in support of instruction and research. Students, faculty and others have been seriously inconvenienced—and
