Carolina to face UVa tonight

Two coaches leave; Heels high in stats

Ron DeMelfi and Moyer Smith, veteran assistant football coaches under Bill Dooley, have resigned, effective Jan. 31. Both have been members of the Carolina coaching staff since Dooley took over as head coach in 1967. DeMelfi plans to go into private business and Smith has accepted a new coaching position at Florida State University.

DeMelfi and Smith served as head freshman coaches before being promoted to the varsity. DeMelfi worked with the varsity as coach of the linebackers and defensive ends while Smith served last year as offensive backfield coach. Dooley said he will have an announcement soon regarding replacements for the two coaches.

The 1972 Tar Heel football squad will be honored at the team's annual awards banquet Tuesday, Jan. 30. The banquet will be held at the Carolina Inn at 6:30 p.m.

Highlight of the banquet will be the presentation of awards. Among the top awards to be made are the Carrington Smith Trophy to the most valuable player, the Bill Arnold Memorial Trophy to the top offensive lineman, the William Prouty Award to the outstanding senior, the T.L. Kemp Award to the best defensive lineman, the Cary Boshamer Award to the outstanding back and the Educational Foundation Watch to an outstanding senior.

GREENSBORO, N.C.—Sophomore David Thompson of N.C. State's unbeaten Wolfpack is still the leader in the ACC's basketball scoring race and Tony Byers of Wake Forest and Maryland's Tom McMillen continue to wage a tight battle for the runnerup spot.

Thompson, who has been in the driver's seat since the opening week, is now hitting 26.1 points per game. Byers is second in the race with 24.9 and McMillen has 24.2.

For the first time in five weeks, the conference has five players scoring more than 20 points per game. Duke's Chris Redding has a 20.1 figure to rank fourth in the race.

State's Tommy Burleson ranks fifth in scoring with a 18.8 average. Last year's scoring champ, Virginia's Barry Parkhill, is sixth behind Burleson at 17.2. Two Tar Heels, George Karl and Bobby Jones, rank seventh and eighth at 16.3 and 16.0.

McMillen leads the league in field-goal accuracy with a percentage of .646. Clemson's Buddy Martin leads in free-throw percentage with .896. Maryland's Len Elmore is tops in rebounding with 12 per game, followed by Burleson (11.2) and Jones (11.1). Jones is also second in field-goal percentage with .582.

In team stats released this week by the ACC Service Bureau, Carolina leads the league in two categories and ranks third in three others.

The Tar Heels are first in scoring defense (giving up 71.4 points per game) and in field goal percentage (.551). They also rank third in scoring offense (89.2 points per game), in average scoring margin (17.8) and in rebounding (46.5 per game). Carolina is seventh in free throw percentage. The Heels are hitting .669 from the line.

State leads the ACC in scoring with 101.2 points per game.

In rebounding, the fourth-rated Maryland Terps lead the ACC with 49.2 per game. State pulls down 47.3 to rank just ahead of Carolina's 46.5. State leads in average scoring margin with an amazing 27.4 per game, followed by Maryland's 20.4 and UNC's 17.8.

Dean Smith's Carolina basketball players may be the only people in Chapel Hill who aren't thinking about Maryland.

It seems the Tar Heels have other things on their minds now the Virginia Cavaliers. Whether anyone knows it or not, Carolina will play Virginia tonight at 9 p.m. in friendly Carmichael Auditorium.

The Heels like to take them one at a time, which means that they haven't had a chance to worry about the big battle with the Terps set for Saturday.

A junior varsity clash between the two schools will begin at 6:55 p.m. Carolina's JV's are 4-4.

The Tar Heels will try to defend their 23-game home winning streak against a squad which has been having trouble lately. Their schedule has graced them with back-to-back contests against State and Maryland, both of which they lost. They are now 6-4 overall (2-2 in the ACC) after a two-week break for exams.

The Wahooks of coach Bill Gibson will provide stiff opposition for Carolina. Virginia is not the national power it once was, but Gibson has enough horses to make it interesting.

The Cavaliers are led by former ACC player-of-the-year Barry Parkhill, the shifty all-American guard who has given Carolina quite a few scares in recent years. His scoring has dropped off this season, and his percentage has fallen to a surprising 37.4 per cent. He's now scoring 17.2 points per game.

But Parkhill is still an extremely valuable player for UVa. His importance can't be measured by scoring alone.

"For one thing, Parkhill is a master at controlling the ball," says Smith. "It's very difficult to press him."

To make up for Parkhill's slipping scoring, Gibson has unleashed the team's second-best player, freshman Wally Walker. A 6-6 forward, he has had a hot hand in recent games, hitting 69 per cent of his shots from the field.

"Wally has come along exceptionally well on defense," Gibson says. "He didn't play in our first two games because of an injury, but he has seen as much time as anyone in our last three." He adds that Walker will be used heavily on offense tonight.

Walker is the team's third-leading scorer with 12.4 points per outing. Gus Gerard, a sophomore forward, is scoring 14.4.

The other Cavalier starters haven't been getting much ink this season, but there is some talent. Gerard is rated one of the top sophs in the ACC by Smith. Senior veteran Jim Hobgood joins him in the frontcourt when Walker switches to guard. And the center will probably be junior Lanny Stahurski, a 6-9, 245-pound mountain who isn't quite as good as last year's big man, Scott McCandlish.

Six-eighth sophomore Spencer Graham will see some action in the frontcourt, and the backcourt will feature soph Brian Tully and junior Al Drummond. Another guard who may play is letterman Steve Morris.

Carolina will start the same combination which has sent the Tar Heels to third in the national polls, along with a nine-game winning streak and a 15-1 record, 3-0 in the ACC.

The backcourt will again be 6-2 senior George Karl and 6-3 junior Darrell Histon. Karl's shooting has been terrible in the last two games, but Histon continues to improve and Karl is still a valuable floor leader.

Up front, it will be 6-9 junior Bobby Jones, 6-10 soph I'd Stahl and 6-8 senior Donn Johnston.

Ready relief will come early and often from the UNC bench. Six-two soph Ray Harrison and 6-0 junior Ray Hite will see plenty of playing time in the backcourt. Six-six John O'Donnell, the big gun in the Duke game, will play in the frontcourt, along with 6-9 freshman Mitch Kupchak.

Karl still leads the Heels in scoring with a 16.3 average, followed by Jones with 16 and Stahl with 13.5. Jones leads in rebounding with an average of 11 per game.

Despite all the other Wahooks, the game will all depend on Parkhill and on Carolina's ability to stop him.

"He'll do his thing—bring the ball up the court, run our offense and do our major scoring," Gibson says. "There's no one else in the conference who is asked to do as much, and in my opinion, no one else can."
