

Nun blasts government

by David Ennis
Staff Writer

"We're up against an administration that has been systematic in its disregard for even the most basic individual rights and liberties," said Sister Elizabeth McAlister in an informal discussion at 4 p.m. Sunday at the Wesley Foundation.

Sister Elizabeth is a nun noted for her radical peace activity and the Harrisburg

Seven conspiracy trial. She talked with a group of about 35 students and members of the Chapel Hill community.

Sister Elizabeth was invited to North Carolina by a Duke student who is a member of the National Union of Theologians and Seminarians, a group that demonstrated outside of the Harrisburg courtroom.

Addressing herself to the future directions of peace activism, Sister

Elizabeth said, "The repression that we're dealing with seems to be a calculated wearing down of energies. What I sense, more than anything else, is a real fatigue in the peace movement."

She cited the inexhaustible supply of funds available to the Justice Department to prosecute peace activists. "The Justice Department can afford to be embarrassed in attempts such as the ones to convict the Chicago and Harrisburg Seven," said Sister Elizabeth. "Their objective is not to win, but to wear people down."

Discussing the oppression by the present administration, Sister Elizabeth said, "I don't think I could live with myself if I sit back and say, 'You've got the government you deserve.'" She indicated that she will continue to work to "expose lies and give the American people something new to trust in."

Sister Elizabeth discussed reasons why the war could continue to go on with the opposition of a majority of the American people.

"The main reason is that we've allowed decisions to be made by a few people behind closed doors," she said. She illustrated this with the fact that the bombing of Laos, a secret for five years, was dictated by a group of five to ten men.

Aldermen schedule reports on flooding

Drainage problems and flooding suffered by Chapel Hill residents will be discussed by the Board of Aldermen during their weekly meeting at 7:30 tonight in the Municipal Building.

Interim Town Manager Meryl Levine and the Public Works Department will report on the flooding and make proposals to correct drainage problems. Bolin and Booker creeks will come under special scrutiny.

The Board will discuss the preliminary plat of the Oak Forest sub-division and the boundary line of the town's Weaver Dairy Road recreational property.

The open space and pedestrian easement plan for the Holland apartments on Chase Avenue will come before the board for approval, and the developers of Camino Ridge apartments have requested an extension on their special use permit. Mrs. Levine will ask the aldermen to consider establishment of a finance department and budget amendments.

Other items to be considered are a moratorium on subsidized housing and water-sewer grants, appointments to the Redevelopment Commission and the Mayor's Committee on the Handicapped.
