North Carolina continues to field the best shooting team in the Atlantic Coast Conference, according to statistics released Wednesday by the ACC Service Bureau.

The Tar Heels, who have led the nation in field-goal accuracy in recent weeks, are shooting 54.3 per cent from the floor to lead the conference.

In other ACC statistics, Carolina ranks third in scoring offense, scoring defense, rebounding and average scoring margin, and seventh in free throw percentage.

The Var Heels are running up an average of 87.5 points per game, behind

State's 96.2 and Maryland's 90.8.

Virginia sets the pace in scoring defense, allowing only 70.0 points per opponent. Clemson surrenders 71.8 and UNC is third with 72.2. In average scoring margin, the Tar Heels remain third behind State and Maryland. State averages 22.6 points more than its foes, Maryland 17.0 and Carolina 15.3. Carolina has the best average scoring margin for ACC games-10.2 points per game.

In rebounding, Carolina again trails Maryland and State. The tall Terps are grabbing 48.2 rebounds per game while State gets 46.7 per outing. Carolina's rebounding figure is 44.5.

Carolina's worst statistical category is again free throw percentage. The Tar Heels, perennially the ACC's worst-shooting team from the line, are shooting only 67.9 per cent of their free throw attempts. Duke, as usual, leads the ACC with 79.2, followed by State,

In individual statistics, State's sensational David Thompson continues to lead the conference in scoring. Thompson is hitting 26.1 points per game, including 88 in three games last week. He was named ACC player of the week for his efforts.

Behind Thompson are Tony Byers of Wake Forest (22.8), Tom McMillen of Maryland (22.3), Chris Redding of Duke (18.8), Tommy Burleson of State (18.0), fine shooting night (54.5 per cent).

Barry Parkhill of Virginia (17.9) and George Karl of Carolina (17.0).

Wally Walker, the freshman from Virginia, has stepped into the lead in field-goal percentage. He's shooting 63.8 per cent, pushing McMillen out of first place. Jones is third at 59.2 per cent. Karl is ninth (52.5) and Stahl ranks 12th (47.3 per cent).

Clemson's Buddy Martin still leads the league in free throw percentage, shooting 88.7 per cent from the line. Behind the amazing Martin is Duke's Gary Melchionni, who hits 86.3. Carolina's Stahl ranks fifth at 82.8, Karl is 12th at 72.5 and Jones is 15th at 62.4.

The last major category is rebounding, where Maryland's towering Len Elmore is the leader with 11.7 rebounds per game. Burleson grabs 10.6 per game to rank second, but Jones is close behind him at 10.5 per game. The only other Tar Heel ranking in rebounding is Stahl with six. He is 15th.

With only a few weeks left in the season, the leaders have emerged. Thompson appears destined to win the ACC scoring race, while Martin should stay on top in free throw accuracy. Elmore and Walker have good chances to win their respective championships.

Tonight the Tar Heels take on the varsity of Georgia Southern College at 8:00 p.m.

Carolina, whose record now consists of four wins and only one defeat, are heavy favorites in the meet. The Tar Heels' only loss so far this season has been at the hands of Michigan. Carolina has never lost to a southern team.

maybe even worse.

Cavaliers stink at Duke Duke's stunning 90-66 win over Virginia the other night leaves a couple of questions unanswered. Is Duke really that good? Is Virginia that bad? Or was it just Cameron Indoor Stadium? Certainly, no one could have foreseen the margin of the Blue Devils' victory, even though everyone knows they are tough at home. Virginia waltzed in with a 10-6 record, including a six-point win over Carolina in Carmichael. Duke was a

early in the second half, and from there Virginia deteriorated so badly that Wahoo coach Bill Gibson was reduced to holding the ball near the end just to get it over

As they did at Maryland a month ago, the Cavaliers looked worse than anyone could imagine. They stunk up Cole Field House en route to a 93-74 rout at the hands of the Terps, with Barry Parkhill scoring two points and fouling out with 15 minutes left. Evidently, their performance in Durham was just as bad,

But Duke broke open a close game Tar Heel matmen beaten by Indians

Just to put it in writing, the North Carolina wrestling team dropped another meet; this time against William and Mary. The Tar Heels traveled to meet the Indians on their home ground and lost

35-6. Wednesday night. "It was the first time in some weeks that we let another team dictate the style and tempo," said head coach Sam Barnes. "They controlled the meet, while we wrestled well but not intelligently. They would run to the edge of the mat then wrestle like hell, so we couldn't get any takedowns." Sophomores Bob Brinton and Charles Moose won decisions in the 134 and 142 pound weight classes respectively for the Tar Heels. Barnes had dropped Moose to 142 from his original 150 class, while moving Marcus Williams to 150 and Bob

Barrett to 158. Barrett, Dennis Ryan, William Huffstetler, and Sam Evans lost by decision. Heavyweight Joel Wright, who was just returning to action after an illness, and Williams were pinned by their
