Next POW release next week

Another 20 American prisoners of the Vietnam War rode a C141 "Freedom Bird" from Hanoi jails to a cheering welcome Sunday at Clark AFB, Philippines. Two hours later they were eating steak dinners.

At the same time in Saigon it was disclosed that the next group of more than 100 U.S. POWs probably would be released on schedule in about one week.

Battles flare in South Vietnam

Fighting flared on South Vietnam's traditional battlefields Sunday, despite a plea from the Joint Military Commission (JMC) to make the three-week-old cease-fire a genuine peace.

The South Vietnamese command said the Communists committed 222 violations of the cease-fire between 6 a.m. Saturday and noon Sunday.

Two Belfast workers killed

Machinegunners in a stolen car killed two postal workers and wounded another Sunday in a Roman Catholic area in Belfast, police said.

British intelligence said U.S. sources supply most of the weapons used in Ulster violence and that former American servicemen are training guerrillas.

Nixon, labor leaders to meet

President Nixon Sunday put the finishing touches on the remarks he hopes will win the support—or at least the neutrality—of organized labor for his Phase III economic measures and his new trade program. Nixon is scheduled to meet today with the 35-member executive council of the AFL-CIO, his first session with the labor leaders since they laughed at him 15 months ago when he attempted to answer criticism of his wage-price policies.

Costello, Mott die Sunday

Frank Costello, 80, the reputed onetime national crime czar, died Sunday morning at Doctor's Hospital in New York and multimillionaire Charles Stewart Mott, the last of the turn-of-the-century auto pioneers and one of the nation's richest men, also died Sunday. Mott was 97.

Born in Italy under the name Castiglia, Costello allegedly came to dominate gambling interests throughout the nation.

Mott amassed a fortune in General Motors Corp. stock, holding some 2% million shares worth $100 million and paying him almost $5 million in dividends alone.

New dorm concept announced

by David Eskridge
Staff Writer

A new concept in dormitory life which would combine residential and academic experiences in one living experience is being planned for implementation next semester on the UNC campus.

A committee to study possible expansions of the concept was jointly appointed last year by Donald Boulton, dean of Student Affairs, and James Gaskin, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

In a press conference Thursday, Boulton and Gaskin discussed the committee's findings with Robert Kepner, director of Residence Life, and committee member Allen Smith.

Boulton said that due to the nature of the program, there would be no "failures," "pilots," or "approvals." He added that it would be a learning experience for everyone involved.

Gaskin claimed that the committee was open to suggestions from anyone. A letter was written, he said, to all department chairmen and deans requesting ideas for the program.

"Nobody is going to dump anything on anybody," Boulton exclaimed. "We welcome any and all suggestions from faculty and students."

A major part of the discussion concerned whether or not a campus dormitory would be used for the program.

Gaskin said no one would be forced out of his room next semester to make way for the program.

A student will have the option to either stay in the dorm and be a part of the program or leave, he explained.

Boulton confirmed Gaskin's comment saying, "People on their own will be able to opt-in or opt-out of the program."

"The whole idea is to make where you're living a little more interesting, not to clean house."

Committee member Smith said that the program should not be confined to one building.

"If a building is selected, it will be only the center of the program, not all of it," Smith said.

Boulton added that if the program starts out in one dormitory it should be able to expand to other dormitories if it is wanted.

News in brief

Meningitis victim dies

Patricia Gail Gorman, the 19-year-old sophomore from Charlotte stricken two weeks ago with bacterial meningitis, died Saturday morning in N.C. Memorial Hospital.

Her condition was diagnosed as meningitis on Friday, Feb. 9. According to the attending physician, Fred Sparling, she died of complications from the disease.

Due to the infectious nature of meningitis, everyone having close contact with Gorman was checked for possible infection, with no other cases showing up.

Sparling said "there is no way of really knowing how she contracted meningitis."

Job interviews

The following organizations will be recruiting on campus the week of Feb. 26-March 2:

Monday, Feb. 26: GTE Sylvania; South Carolina National Bank; Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery; Chubb & Son, Inc.; Carnation Company.

Tuesday, Feb. 27: Carnation Company; Good Humor Corporation (summer jobs); Ernst & Ernst; First Union National Bank (MBA); Ford Motor Company.

Wednesday, Feb. 28: First Union National Bank (bachelor's degree); Ford Motor Company; Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith; Vanity Fair Corporation; Texfi Industries.

Thursday, March 1: U.S. General Accounting Office; University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Aetna Life and Casualty Company; Burlington Industries.

Sex survey set

Students who have received information or counseling from the Human Sexuality Information and Counseling Service are asked to pick up a questionnaire from the Union Desk or room 255 C in the Union.

The confidential questionnaire is designed to provide direct feedback to the service from the students, allowing the service to survey its effectiveness in meeting student needs.

The completed forms may be placed in any mailbox.

Board to meet

Chapel Hill aldermen will act on a resolution supporting the use of Power Bill funds for mass transit during their weekly meeting at 7:30 tomorrow night in the Municipal Building.

A bill pending in the N.C. Legislature would allow the use of Power Bill funds for projects other than road improvement.

Alderman Joe Nassif will continue his discussion of reorganizing the town's review process for planning and zoning matters and the board will discuss the final plat approval for a section of Lake Forest Estates.

The board will also take nominations to fill five vacancies on the Mayor's Committee on the Handicapped, and one vacancy on the Recreation Commission created by Tommy Gardner's resignation when he was appointed to the Board of Aldermen.

The aldermen will also adopt a reclassification of the Town purchasing agent's position and will approve several budget amendments.
