Two arrested for pills, pot

Two UNC students, Winslow Melvin, 20, and Fredrick March, 22, were charged Tuesday night with possession of marijuana and amphetamines by Chapel Hill police and Durham County Sheriff's detectives.

Chapel Hill detectives Bill Creel and Donald Tripp allegedly found a brick of marijuana weighing more than a pound and some hashish in Melvin's car Tuesday afternoon.

March was arrested at Melvin's residence at E-10 Broadmoor Apartments in Durham, where police say they found three bottles of 1,000 yellow pills, a bag of 1,000 pink pills and eight one-ounce bags of marijuana. The pills were identified as amphetamines, according to detective Walter Bogen.

Both men were released on bond.

Drip, drip, drip

Carboro was without water most of Wednesday as a result of a main waterline break.

The break occurred under Main Street near the intersection with Greensboro Street. According to a spokesman from the Carboro Water and Sewer Department, someone reported water leaking into the street Wednesday morning. He said the department received numerous calls from Carboro residents complaining that they had no water.

Workmen located the damaged section under the street and as of press time they were still working to repair the leak. Water service was expected to be restored by early evening.

Bogus mobsters aid Heart Fund

Afternoon raids by a notorious band of kidnapers left eight sororities on campus without house mothers Wednesday.

Dressed as gangsters, the brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity broke into eight of the campuses nine sorority houses between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m. and successfully made off with the house mothers, leaving simple instructions for ransom in each case.

The sisters of each sorority were instructed to bring $10 to the Lambda Chi Alpha house on E. Franklin Street and knock three times. Their mother would then be returned to them unharmed.

The kidnapping was a project of the Lambda Chis' to raise money and gain publicity for the Heart Fund. The $80 collected in ransoms will be donated to the fund.

The house mothers spent the afternoon playing bridge and pinball, drinking coffee and talking. As they were rescued, they were each given a single red rose in its own vase.

"I think it's wonderful," said Mrs. Marjorie Ogburn, of Kappa Alpha Theta, commenting on the kidnapping. "I had a wonderful time."

"It's fun!" said another of the hostages, Mrs. Esther J. Coleman of the Sigma Sigma house. "I beat 'em all at pinball."

Harold Waters, president of the fraternity, said, "We wanted to raise money for the Heart Fund and make people aware that February is Heart Month."
