

'Implied-consent' bills pending

by Jody Meacham
Staff Writer

The N.C. Senate approved the second reading of two bills Wednesday which would permit police to administer tests to any arrested driver to determine if that driver were driving under the influence of alcohol. If passed on their third reading today, only ratification by the House would be necessary to make these so called "implied-consent bills" law.

The first of the two bills, sponsored by Sen. A.B. Coleman of Orange County and Senators Smith of Guilford and Garrison of Randolph counties, would require drivers to submit to a breathalyzer test if the arresting officer suspected them of driving under the influence of alcohol. Failure to submit to the test would result in the revocation of the driver's license for one year, subject to an appeal.

If a driver appealed the action within three days of notification of the revocation of his license, he could subpoena the arresting officer to appear at a hearing in the county where the test was refused to determine whether the officer had reasonable grounds to suspect the driver had been drunk.

The driver could appeal the hearing decision to a superior court.

The second bill would require the driver to submit to chemical tests to determine the alcoholic content of his blood. The officer would have to take the driver to a person qualified to administer such tests.

The administrator of the test would be required, under the provisions of the bill, to make certain information about the law known to the driver:

> That he has a right to refuse to take the test.

> That refusal to take the test will result in revocation of his driving privilege for one year.

> That he may have a physician, qualified technician, chemist, registered nurse or other qualified person of his own choosing administer a chemical-test or tests in addition to any administered at the direction of the law enforcement officer.

> That he may call an attorney and select a witness to view for him the testing procedures, but that the test shall not be delayed for this purpose for a period in excess of 30 minutes from the time he is notified of his rights.

The results of this procedure are also subject to a hearing under circumstances similar to the first law. Whether or not the driver was informed of the consequences of refusing to take the chemical tests can be an issue in the hearing.

News in brief

CP&L silent on study

Officials of the Carolina Power and Light Company in Raleigh have decided not to comment on the controversial nuclear power study released by the Chapel Hill headquarters of ECOS Saturday.

Most of the controversy stems from the request by ECOS that construction be halted on the company's nuclear power generating station in Wake County near Bonsel. The environmental group's request has attracted comment in the editorial and news columns of most of N.C.'s major newspapers.

ECOS advocates a moratorium on construction and operation of all nuclear power plants until problems of environmental disruption and plant safety are resolved.

APO to sponsor local road rallye

Attention all race car drivers and all who would like to be.

APO will sponsor the first annual 100-mile road rallye for the benefit of the Campus Chest drive this spring.

The rallye, which is to take the place of the ugly man on campus contest, was organized in the hopes of getting more people involved and raising more money.

Registration for the rallye will begin on March 8 with a registration fee of $40. Drivers are urged to raise the money for the fee and, as an incentive for raising extra money, they will be given a bonus point to compute against their score for each dollar over the $40 fee.

Rallye races, unlike some automobile races, are scored on the basis of the time needed to complete the course and on the accuracy of following the given driving instructions. Each car is timed only against the clock.

The race is set up to take a designated amount of time. The winner is the driver who finishes with the fewest number of points and the time nearest that set.

Drivers get points by taking too much or too little time to cover each designated portion of the course. Check points are set up along the course to determine the amount of time each driver uses per portion of the course.

Each driver should also take a navigator to help locate the indefinite directional markers. If the directions are not followed exactly, the car loses points. Hidden check points will be set up to determine the accuracy of each car.

There will be separate divisions for sororities, fraternities and residence halls. A trophy will be awarded, along with other prizes, to the winner in each division.

Death toll 99 in airline crash

One of the Israeli pilots who shot down a Libyan airliner with 106 persons aboard said Thursday he was only trying to force it down. Defense Minister Moshe Dayan defended the incident and said the Boeing 727 must have had "hostile intentions."

The death toll from the airliner's fiery descent into the occupied Sinai Peninsula 12 miles east of the Suez Canal Wednesday stood at 99, with two of the seven survivors in very serious condition with burns.

Fighting in Laos continues

Both sides in the 10-year war in Laos were ordered to stop shooting Thursday, but heavy fighting continued without U.S. air support after the official cease-fire went into effect.

The truce agreement was signed Wednesday by Laotian government and Communist Pathet Lao officials and went into effect at midnight (EST) Wednesday.

Retail food prices skyrocket

Retail food prices rose faster in January than in any month since the Korean War and the administration warned that more big increases were on the way.

The cost of groceries and restaurant meals surged 2.1 per cent last month, the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) reported Wednesday pushed by unusually steep prices for the basics of the family diet—meat, poultry, eggs, fish, fruits and vegetables.
