

Year in Seville

New foreign study open

Registration for the UNC Department of Romance Language's new program of study at the University of Seville in Spain will continue for several weeks. Similar in structure to UNC's Year at Lyon program, the Year-in-Seville will offer a program of study in Spanish civilization to a maximum of 20 students for an entire academic year.

Professor A.V. Ebersole, assistant chairman for Spanish in the Department of Romance Languages stated, "Basically the program is open to people having a minimum of three semesters of Spanish and who are interested in living in a completely Spanish-speaking environment while at a university."

February after arranging the details of the new program, added that the University of Seville offers exceptional courses of instruction in the fields of general history, archaeology, and art and music history.

These, and all of the other courses offered by the university, will be open to UNC students after an initial month of intensive study of Spanish beginning in the fall.

"There was no program in the state of North Carolina for a student to spend an entire academic year in Spain. Because of the success of the Lyon program, we have decided to expand," Ebersole said.

Students who are interested in this program may contact Ebersole in 234 Dey Hall or the department secretary in 238 Dey for further information and applications. Cost of the program is estimated to run approximately the same as a year at UNC.

WCAR Promotions Director Gary Rendsburg said, "The show promotes itself as a rockumentary. It's basically a history of rock music starting from 1953 to the present. It highlights all the great stars-Elvis Presley, Fats Domino, Ray Charles, the Supremes, the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Bob Dylan, Simon and Garfunkel and others."

"The History of Rock and Roll" is a production of American Independent Radio, a division of Drake-Chenault Enterprises. Rendsburg commented that station personnel have contracted with American Independent Radio to present the special once during the spring semester and again during the fall.

New rush eligibility to benefit freshmen

First semester freshmen will be allowed to pledge fraternities next year, according to Mike Winesette, public relations vice president for the Intra-Fraternal Council (IFC).

The new policy on freshmen, part of IFC's recently adopted open rush system, will put rush on a more personal basis.

"Until now," Winesette said, "potential pledges had to wait several weeks before formal rush allowed them to visit the houses and freshmen had to wait a semester. With the new informal system, brothers will make an attempt to meet freshmen and transfers over the summer, their goal being to reach them earlier than before. This way, everyone will return from summer knowing where their interests are."

The purpose behind pledging first semester freshmen is to give them an unbiased view of fraternities before they become molded into dorm life and hear prejudiced opinions. They can also function as ambassador to the fraternities by providing them with names and spreading the word through the dorms.

"The new system," Winesette said, "is more realistic. It will reach more people and will allow each house to conduct rush in a manner that will fit its individual needs."

Although formal rush will still exist, it will be de-emphasized. Fraternities are now striving for rush on a one-to-one basis between brothers and potential pledges.

Mebane, George win BSM run-off

Willie Mebane won the chairmanship of the Black Student Movement (BSM) by a slim margin over Larry Williams in Thursday's run-off election. Ronald George won the vice-chairman post over Leonard Lee.

Mebane, a sophomore, said he was happy to be elected, and stressed that he will work closely with Williams next year as his "right-hand man."

Mebane, who is replacing Warren Carson, said one of his goals will be to make the BSM responsive to the needs of black students on campus. He cited several areas of black student need in which the BSM will work, including financial aid cuts, black student admittance to the university, teacher and student discrimination and cutting of the black studies program.
