

Cougs get Chones in league dealings

United Press International

GREENSBORO (UPI)—The Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association Tuesday announced the acquisition of star center Jim Chones from the New York Nets for a "high draft choice" and an undisclosed sum of cash.

"We feel he has limitless potential," said Cougar General Manager and President Carl Scheer in announcing the acquisition here.

"This also increases even more our club's flexibility, freeing us to play Tom Owens more at forward, his natural position."

Chones, who led the balloting in the ABA coaches All-Rookie team last April, missed only two regular season games with the Nets.

Chones, 23, was reported by the Charlotte news to have a $1.8 million long term contract, but Cougar officials declined to discuss money terms.

Carolina Coach Larry Brown said the transaction was "just a super deal for us" and would give the Cougars an even better shot at repeating as ABA Eastern Division champions in the coming season.

"Jim can strengthen us in so many areas," said Brown. "We now have two really young centers in Roger Brown and Jim Chones and their presence should help each other."

A native of Rabin, Wis., Chones averaged 51.4 per cent in field goal percentage last season for the Nets. He came to New York from Milwaukee's Marquette University in his junior year.

Jim Chones a bargain

The acquisition of Jim Chones by the Carolina Cougars should have tremendous impact on the progress of the ABA franchise here in North Carolina, both on the court and at the box office.

Chones, the former Marquette star, has all the tools needed to become a dominant figure at his natural center position.

Former New York Nets coach Lou Carnesecca used Chones at the forward spot, favoring Billy Paultz at the center post.

In yesterday's press conference, the Cougars indicated that they will use Chones as a center and will return Tom Owens to his natural position at forward.

Chones, who dropped out of Marquette in his senior year after previously leading the Warriors to an NIT championship, came on strong in the latter stages of the last ABA campaign. A slow start by Chones had many wondering whether the former collegiate great was worthy of the million dollar contract he signed with the New York Nets.

The Nets were forced to relieve themselves of Chones and his reported $1.8 million dollar pact after they emptied their bank accounts to acquire Julius Erving from the Virginia Squires last month.

The Cougars wisely cashed in on the opportunity to obtain Chones, and by doing so greatly strengthened their chances of becoming a lasting professional franchise.

It is common knowledge that success or failure in the professional game is dependent on whether or not a team has the services of a powerful and agile big man. Had Carolina a man of Chones' calibre at the center post during last season's divisional finals against Kentucky, the Colonels might have been at home frying chicken and watching the Cougars during the ABA finals.

Monday Night Baseball

The Giants-Dodgers clash on Monday Night baseball this week reaffirmed my feelings that the national pastime is far from what Howard Cosell deems "boring." In fact, the contest between the two National League West powers was tremendously exciting, fast paced and entertaining.

NBC has done much to add spice to what already was a wholesome diet of baseball coverage. The introduction this summer of "guest commentators" into the broadcast booth was a noble and ambitious experiment.

Monday evening, Chuck Connors joined the smooth yet overexposed Curt Gowdy and the always informative Tony Kuback for what turned out to be an incredible ballgame from Candlestick Park that the Giants won on a grand slam homer by Bobby Bonds in the bottom of the ninth.

Although several of the celebrity guest commentators were out of their league in the television booth (notably Danny Kaye who added inane commentary to what was a bust of a game from Montreal), a great number of them provided a pleasant diversion from the jock mentality dialogue of sportscasters that we are all too familiar with.

Chuck Connors, who was both a professional baseball player with the Dodgers and a pro basketball player with the Celtics in the early years of the NBA, was especially at home describing the play-by-play and adding his special line of color commentary.

Yet, when the last run was recorded, it was the game itself that provided the most entertainment, not the people commenting on the game.

Women's teams organizing

by Susan Shackelford Sports Writer

Females, if you're tired of the monotonous eat, sleep, study routine, you should incorporate a new, exciting activity into your weekly schedule. Consider women's intramurals.

Spokeswomen to represent the various dorms, sororities, and student groups are now being recruited by dorm and sorority presidents and RA's. These intramural managers will comprise the Women's Athletic Association (WAA) Council.

WAA representatives serve on a voluntary basis. Their overall responsibility is to promote interest, entries, and participation. Furthermore, they supervise the election of respective team captains and attend meetings of the WAA Council. Any woman interested in being a WAA representative should contact her dorm or sorority president, RA, or the Intramural Office.

The first WAA Council meeting is Wednesday, September 12 at 5 p.m. in the Ramshead Picnic Area. Each intramural manager (WAA representative) should contact Maxine Francis at the Intramural Office in Woollen Gymnasium if she plans to attend the picnic.

Women on the graduate level are also encouraged to enter teams in intramural competition. Also, anyone in a dorm or sorority who wishes to participate and fails to have a team at her residence should contact the Intramural Office about entering activities.

Entries for softball and tennis are due at the Intramural Office in Woollen by Sept. 19. For the co-recreational sport of volleyball, badminton, and horseshoes entries are due Sept. 18.

There will be an organizational meeting for all persons interested in joining the women's swim team at 4 p.m. Sept. 11 in the women's gym.

The women's tennis team will hold an organizational meeting at 4 p.m. Sept. 6 in the women's gym.

There are several hundred student tickets for the State game left. Students may purchase tickets for $3.50 with an I.D. starting at 8:30 in the morning at Carmichael.

UNC soccer team prepares

The UNC varsity soccer team faces "an incredibly tough schedule" this season, according to coach Kip Ward, but both the players and coaches seem to agree that this year's team wants to win very badly and is determined to have a good season.

"The most important single factor is our experience in the halfback and forward positions," Ward said.

Carolina has four players at half back with at least two years experience, including Captain Anson Dorrance, a senior from Greenwich, Connecticut who is a candidate for All-American.

Teammates Tim O'Connor, Rod Hassel and Jeff Nelson promise to add an unusual amount of depth to the halfback squad.

The Tar Heels' front line features a number of outstanding players such as David Taylor, a junior who has played on the varsity team since his freshman year, Pat Brady, Geoff Griffin, Rick Culberson, Tracy Jones and Steve Dawson, all of whom Coach Ward described as "seasoned and able to adapt to pressure."

Mike Disston, Kevin Ledwith, John Rhodes and Mark Baldwin form the core of the Tar Heel fullback squad and round out a team which some of the players feel is the best they have been on.

The Tar Heels, who have no foreign students and give virtually no scholarships, managed to tie Duke for second place last year, and had an overall record of 6-4-1.

The soccer team will open its season September 18 in a road game against Belmont Abbey.
