Power shortage threatens Northwest

GLENEDEEN BEACH, Ore.—The threat of an electric power shortage in the Pacific Northwest is so strong that Oregon Gov. Tom McCall Sunday ordered all outdoor lighting not needed for security purposes to be turned off starting tonight.

Western governors were told plans for mandatory cuts of up to 25 per cent should be ready by Nov. 1.

Governors lash administration

POINT CLEAR, Ala.—Southern governors unleashed a barrage of criticism of Nixon Administration spending policies Monday, calling them unfair, unwarranted and dangerous.

The governors devoted most of the opening day of the Southern Governors Conference to speeches and press conferences critical of the federal government.

Nixon endorses 'clearcutting'

WASHINGTON—President Nixon Monday endorsed a recommendation by an advisory panel for substantial increases in logging, including the controversial practice of "clearcutting," in national forests to ease the growing lumber shortage for housing and other needs.

Nixon said the panel had determined fears of widespread environmental damage due to timber harvesting "would appear to be unfounded, misleading or exaggerated."

Hunt testifies—Watergate

Plot to discredit JFK told

WASHINGTON—Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt testified Monday that the White House, trying to win the Catholic vote for President Nixon in 1972, tried to prove falsely that the Kennedy administration had plotted the 1963 assassination of President Diem of South Vietnam.

Hunt, first witness as the Senate Watergate hearings resumed after a seven-week recess, said he had been "directed" by Charles W. Colson, then a special counsel to Nixon, to concoct phony State Department cables to implicate Kennedy in the deaths of Ngo Dinh Diem and his brother-in-law, Ngo Dinh Nhu.

"I believe it was desired by Mr. Colson, or at least some of his colleagues, to establish that a Catholic U.S. administration had conspired in the assassination of a Catholic chief of state of another country," Hunt testified.

The implication was that Catholic voters would vote for Nixon when they learned that Kennedy, a Democrat, had been implicated in the assassination.

Hunt, one of the original Watergate Seven who pleaded guilty in January to conspiracy, burglary, bugging and wiretapping in the bugging scandal, said he believed he had been acting as a secret government agent when he broke into the Democrats' offices in the Watergate complex and participated in the burglary at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

He said in the aftermath he felt "crushed by the failure of my government to protect me and my family, as in the past it has always done for clandestine agents."

As part of his clandestine work, Hunt said, Colson asked him to review secret government communications in the weeks leading up to the 1963 coup in which Diem and Nhu were killed. He said he found gaps in the records but nonetheless felt there was "every reason to believe...that the Kennedy administration was implicitly if not explicitly responsible" for their deaths.

"He (Colson) suggested I might be able to improve on the record...to create or fabricate, to substitute for the missing chronological cables," Hunt testified.

Hunt said he did so, and then at Colson's instructions leaked the phony cables to William Lambert, then a reporter for Life magazine.

"I think the line of questioning will show...there was an effort by Mr. Colson to try to discredit the Kennedy administration and therefore the Democratic party during the election by linking them to the assassination of Premier Diem and bring the Catholic vote away from the Democratic party," responded Chief Committee Counsel Samuel Dash.

Kissinger 'seeks true peace'

UNITED NATIONS—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Monday the United States "seeks true peace, not simply an armistice," and called upon all members of the United Nations (U.N.) to abandon their bickering and join in a cooperative effort for a more harmonious world.

Kissinger, the first foreign-born U.S. secretary of state, made his main address to the U.N. General Assembly almost exactly 48 hours after being sworn into office at the White House.

Kissinger's speech was a broad philosophical outline of "the spirit of American foreign policy" in which he pledged U.S. efforts and influence in settling such regional issues as the Middle East and Southeast Asia, but he made no specific pledges beyond promising that the United States would not abandon its traditional allies in carrying out its policy of detente with the Soviet Union and China.

Kissinger acknowledged that the U.S. people and government "have sometimes been disappointed because this organization has not been more successful in translating the hopes for universal peace of its architects into concrete accomplishments."

While he has in the past generally been scornful of the ability of the United Nations to deal with major political issues in a troubled world, Kissinger said that "despite our disappointments, my country remains committed to the goal of a world opportunity. We will continue to work in this Parliament of Man to make it a reality."

The secretary of state expressed continuing satisfaction over the successes of American diplomacy in dealing with Moscow and Peking.

Gas price increase sought

WASHINGTON—With many gas stations across the nation shut down in protest, President Nixon asked the Cost of Living Council (CLC) Monday to increase the Phase IV retail gasoline price ceiling this week.

White House Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon asked CLC Chairman John Dunlop to "expedite" a review of cost data submitted by the gasoline dealers and decide on the increase before the end of the week.
