

Tailback Billy Hite bursts up the middle of the Missouri line for a short gain as sophomore quarterback Billy Paschall watches. Paschall stepped into the game after starter Chris Kupec suffered a broken collarbone.

Dooley proud of Paschall and team

When defending Atlantic Coast Conference champion North Carolina began its season this year, one position Coach Bill Dooley wasn't overly worried about was quarterback.

First there was veteran Nick Vidnovic. And as a backup there was Chris Kupec. But then came Maryland and Vidnovic was sidelined with a shoulder injury. And then came Missouri and Kupec suffered a broken collarbone.

That might seem likely to leave Dooley sinking into melancholy with Vidnovic still an indefinite player and with arch-rival North Carolina State, win-hungry after two straight losses to non-conference foes, waiting in Raleigh for the Tar Heels Saturday. But not so. With sophomore Billy Paschall around, it turns out that Dooley may have more depth at quarterback than even he had thought.

Paschall, despite a couple of costly fumbles in the Tar Heels 27-14 loss to Missouri, connected on nine of 15 passes for 115 yards and ran for 68 yards while filling in for Kupec.

"For a third string quarterback to come off the bench and give us that type leadership is remarkable," Dooley said. "He showed me a lot out there."

Dooley said he was proud of the way his squad was playing and that "I feel we can be a good football team if we can just execute better."

While Dooley could see some good in the loss to Missouri, State Coach Lou Holtz was much less optimistic about the Wolfpack's 31-21 loss to Georgia.

"We just played dumb, stupid football," he said. "It was the worst we've played in a while. And that's not the players' fault, it's the coaches."

State (2-2, 1-0), could go ahead of Maryland (2-1, 1-0) in the ACC championship race with a win Saturday. A victory by Carolina (1-2, 0-1) would put Maryland in the lead. The Tar Heels last year won the game 34-33.

In the only conference game last weekend, Virginia surprised Duke 7-3, causing Cavalier coach Don Lawrence to proclaim that Virginia (2-2, 1-0) has begun a new trend.

In other games of the past weekend, Wake Forest (1-2, 0-0) was demolished 41-0 by Southern Conference power Richmond; Maryland sept past hapless Villanova 31-3; and scrappy Clemson was finally beaten by Georgia Tech 29-21.

Frosh play today

Last week against the N.C. State Wolflets the Tar Babies started jumping up and down excitedly at the beginning of the fourth quarter. The reason they were acting in this atypical manner is that they knew they were going to win. Enthusiasm breeds confidence.

Against the Wolflets, the Tar Babies were at their big-play best, as they intercepted three passes, recovered three fumbles and stopped State twice inside the Carolina 20.

It was a perfect example of Carolina's defensive philosophy — bend but don't break. The Tar Babies were willing to give up a little yardage at a time to State's veer offense but not a lot of yardage at once.

The offense didn't waste these opportunities as two turnovers led directly to touchdowns.

Today the Tar Babies face another veer attack in Richmond. Their offense is not as potent as the Wolflets but the task will be made more difficult by a rash of injuries to Carolina's offensive squad.

Richmond on the other hand, has most of its key players healthy. Their quarterback Larry Shaw, brother of N.C. State QB Bruce Shaw and Sophomore Bruce Wilkerson, the third quarterback on the varsity, are both available.
