

Board of Governors approve requests for University budget

by Janet Langston
Staff Writer

Budget requests totalling $248.3 million were approved Monday by the UNC Board of Governors. The requests will next be forwarded to the N.C. General Assembly for approval when it convenes in January.

The total General Fund Budget request is made up of three parts. $212.8 million would continue present University programs, while $11 million is for academic salary increases. A change budget, for all other needs, such as operating costs and capital improvements; would total $24.5 million.

No funds were included from the recent medical consultants report. President William Friday said the medical recommendations budget will hopefully be ready before the General Assembly meets.

The Board directed President Friday Sept. 27 to outline a program consistent with recommendations embodied in the report, to be presented as a supplemental budget.

The total general funds requests are part of a $402.3 million budget, of which $154 million should be financed by estimated receipts.

Academic salary increases are for University employees not covered by the State Personnel Act, and would be effective June 30, 1974.

The change represents an eight per cent increase. The increase would keep University salaries competitive and would aid in recruiting the Budget Committee reported. A $300,000 appropriation will continue the faculty up-grading program begun this year.

The operating budget lists changes in tuition and fees for university campuses. This is the first step to equalize tuition and fees within the UNC system.

There are three carry-over items on the budget from last year. Two reserves, $7.5 million for construction of a N.C. medical school, and $3.5 million to compensate for a loss of federal funding, were approved last year by the General Assembly, and are not included this year.

Another $69.3 million is reserved for "sizeable" capital improvements, said Felix Joyner, University vice-president for finance.

The $248.3 million budget as specified in categories by the Committee included:

- Maintaining the present level of instruction, research and public service programs of the University of North Carolina — $192.1 million;
- Continuing already established State aid programs, administered by the Board — $6.9 million. These include aid to private N.C. universities, Duke and Bowman-Gray medical schools and 190 spaces in universities and colleges within the country for North Carolina residents; matching state appropriations and a grant-in-aid reserve for the Highlands Biological Station.
- Operating the North Carolina Memorial Hospital — $16.2 million;
- Increasing University academic salaries, effective June 30, 1974 — $10.8 million;
- Providing more funds to allow enrollment increases and larger resident student bodies — $4.0 million;
- Initiating a program to improve the existing University library system — $2.3 million;
- Meeting other increases in current operations budgets for various improvements and expansions — $6.4 million; funding a limited program of capital improvements to meet emergency and special needs — $9.6 million.

Henry W. Lewis was appointed the new Institute of Government director to replace John Sanders, who recently accepted a position as UNC vice-president for planning. Lewis will serve a five-year term, effective Nov. 1, 1973. He will retain his current position as Professor of Public Law and Government at the Institute of Government.

Vernon Lee Bounds Jr. was also named a William Rand Kenan Jr. Professor of Public Law and Administration in the Political Science Department.

He was former Director of Prisons and Commissioner of Correction before coming to UNC-CH earlier this year. His position is effective January 1, 1974.

Politics revert to old days

Candidates talk at fair

Chapel Hill politics took on the flavor of the old-fashioned stump speaking at a candidates' fair sponsored by the League of Women Voters Saturday at University Mall.

Chapel Hill candidates for mayor, alderman, and school board took the platform in the midst of shifting crowds of shoppers to speak for and against issues, to discuss their merits and in some cases to criticize their opponents.

Mayor Howard Lee, seeking re-election to his third term, spoke briefly.

"There are so many programs we've started that are now at the point of completion," he said. "It's imperative that I stay in the position of mayor to see them brought to a logical and constructive conclusion."

"I am committed," he added, "to long-range planning for Chapel Hill, to aiding the University in divesting itself of the utilities, and to more advanced recreational facilities for Chapel Hill."

Following Lee was Douglas Holmes, a

UNC graduate student who filed for mayor just before the deadline. Holmes was a candidate for mayor in 1972, but lost to Lee. Holmes accused Lee of increasing Chapel Hill expenses to the detriment of the town.

"My interest in running for mayor began in 1971 with the controversy over the NCNB building downtown," he said. "In opposing that monstrosity, I sought help from Mayor Lee and it was not forthcoming."

"With the high visibility of Mayor Lee—running for U.S. Congress, talking about running for lieutenant governor—I ask you, can he have the long-range interests of Chapel Hill at heart?"

Holmes cited yearly tax increases since 1970 as examples of the increased spending that he said is occurring under the Lee administration.

The five candidates for the four Board of Alderman seats took turns speaking briefly after Holmes.

Shirley Marshall, wearing her campaign buttons for earrings, was enthusiastic about the work the board has done this year.

"Our managerial team is complete," she said. "We have a public works director, a new town manager and a transportation director. They are young and their enthusiasm is contagious."

Incumbent Thomas Gardner, said he supports the purchase of the utilities by the town, and supports the new dog ordinance.

He was critical of a ward system for Chapel Hill, a topic of growing discussion, saying it would fragment neighborhoods.

Sid Rancer, a Durham businessman and local actor, urged caution and careful study before purchase of the utilities, with an eye to future expansion. He said he was in favor of a bus system that works, but cautioned that it should be viewed only as an experiment.

Alexander Julian, also a candidate for alderman, drew the most laughs with his suggestion to build a wall around the town to keep people out. New to politics, Julian said he planned no active campaign and quickly summed up his opinion on present issues.

"The how, when, where and why of development in Chapel Hill is the core of my campaign," he said. "I also think we are long overdue to a realistic approach to bicycling in this town."

Gerry Cohen, a UNC law student, opposed the I-40 route, saying that he had filed his comments in opposition with the state. He said the town's new Charter Commission should consider reducing the four-year alderman term and setting up a partial ward system that would allow minority representation on the board.

Why should anyone be a priest?

Why study for the priesthood? Why be part of a dying institution? Why commit yourself to celibacy? Indeed, why get closer to misery in a world that is already miserable enough?

There aren't any easy answers to these questions—even for a Paulist. But he knows that today's world desperately needs people who are committed to ideals and beliefs. In our search for peace of mind and country, happiness, love and brotherhood, we are really seeking meaning—a reason for being.

The Paulist doesn't feel the world is dying; he rejoices in the signs of hope around him and listens for the sounds of love. Men like the Paulists rekindle our spirits and their love for Him includes and embraces all of us.

Every Paulist is a missionary. Whether he is in the pulpit or the parish house, on campus or in ghettos... whether he communicates with the spoken word or the printed word, the Paulist is talking about what concerns him most: the love of Christ for all people.

If you are looking for answers, talk to us. Together we may find them. For more information about the Paulist priesthood, send for THE PAULIST PAPERS—an exciting new kit of articles, posters and recordings about America's first religious community.

LANGUAGE MAJORS
NSA speaks your language

And furthermore, if you are especially adept in certain foreign languages, the National Security Agency is ready to give you immediate language assignments, advanced refresher, or special vocabulary training or may even train you in an entirely new language.

Career language positions are available in the fields of translation, transcription, analysis and documentation. Fluency in speaking is not essential, but knowledge of idiomatic, colloquial and dialectal variations is desirable.

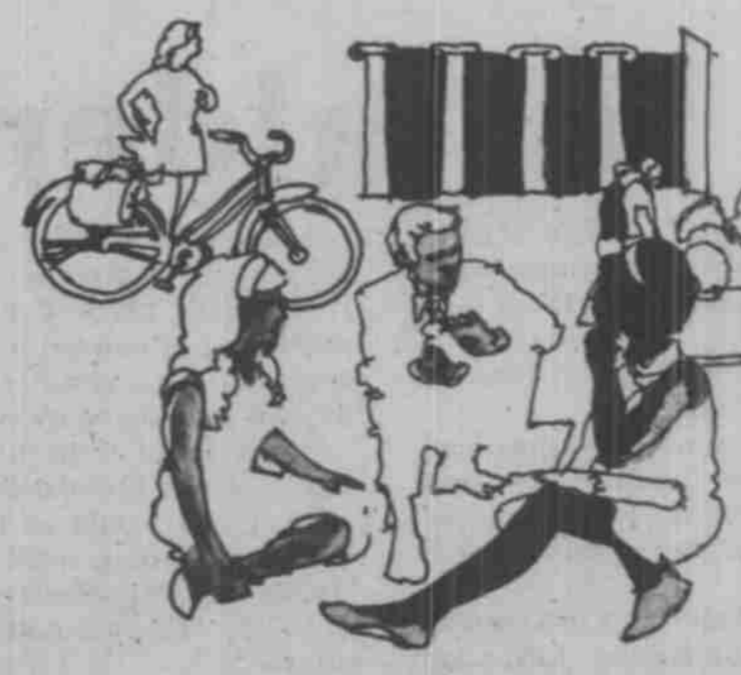

At NSA you will be joining an Agency of national prominence—a unique civilian organization responsible for developing "secure" communications systems to transmit and receive vital information.

NSA offers you this opportunity to further broaden your knowledge of modern language or area studies, and to use your talents in a challenging and rewarding career while you enjoy also the broad, liberal benefits of Federal employment. In return, we ask that you not only know your language, but that you be flexible, naturally inventive and intellectually curious. That's a lot to ask.

Do you fit the picture?

Where to go... what to do: Language applicants must take the Professional Qualification Test (PQT) as a prerequisite to NSA interviews for employment. Pick up a PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office, the sooner the better. It contains a brief registration form which must be received in Berkeley, California by November 21 for the December 1 test.

Activities Board hears complaints

An open meeting of the Union Activities Board, will be held at 2 p.m., Wed., Oct. 24, in the Great Hall. All students are invited to attend.

The open session is being held to allow students a chance to discuss grievances they have with the Activities Board, and to acquaint students with the board's problems.

Pine trees to be thinned

Botanical Garden officials have authorized the cutting of some pine trees in the Botanical Garden in an attempt to reduce future losses to the southern pine beetle.

The tree-thinning in the Coker Pinetum area of the garden will begin Thursday.

Large trees prevent many small trees in the Coker Pinetum from getting sunlight. "The small ones will get weaker and sicker and become prime targets for the beetle," Dr. Ritchie Bell, director of the garden, said.
