Cynthia Lanane doesn't want to be known as the first female UNC campus police officer. Instead she wants to be known as a young person with new ideas in law enforcement.

A confident young woman, Lanane approaches her new job with a sensitivity and caring that might seem surprising in her type of work.

Lanane said she centers her work around people and tries to be understanding with those with problems. She said her job as officer presents an opportunity to help people.

When Lanane became a dispatcher for Campus Police a year-and-a-half ago, she had no idea of becoming an officer.

"I'm an adventurous person and the new job is a challenge for me. An officer can never anticipate what's going to happen next," she said.

Lanane said her attitude towards policemen has changed in the last couple of years. She said she used to dislike the police, viewing them as authoritative, especially during the riots in the early 1970's while she was a student in Washington, D.C.

Lanane has a few suggestions to improve the policeman's job. She thinks officers should know where to refer people with problems for help.

Lanane also believes "the stereotyped version of an officer has got to change."

When she approaches people, Lanane said her uniform can be an advantage and a hindrance. She said, "Give me time to say hello and the uniform will disappear."

Officer Lanane has the same assignments as other members of the Campus Police. Two or three nights a week she patrols alone in a car and the rest of the week on foot.

Although she encountered some discrimination from male officers at first, Lanane said she is accepted by the men with whom she works.

Capt. E.B. Riggsbee said he's had no problems with the new officer being a female. "She's been through five weeks of training just like a male and I think she can take care of herself," he said.

Lanane recently completed her basic training under a Durham Technical Institute program conducted at the Chapel Hill Police Department. During July and August she attended rookie school including 200 hours of basic police training.

Lanane will graduate from Durham Tech this spring with an associate degree in criminal justice and plans to attend N.C. Central University full-time next year to get her degree in criminal justice.

No foul play seen in death

Thomas Palmer Jerman Jr., of D-2 Estes Park Apartments in Carrboro, was found dead in his apartment Wednesday night, according to Carrboro Police Chief John Blackwood.

Blackwood said Jerman's body was discovered at approximately 10 p.m. Cause of death has not been determined but Blackwood said there was no evidence of foul play.

An autopsy was being performed Thursday according to the N.C. Medical Examiner's office, where the body was taken.

Blackwood estimated Jerman's age as being between 25 and 26 years old. His body was discovered by Rick Sigmon, a neighbor. Jerman had been dead for 12 to 16 hours, Blackwood said.

Jerman, a native of Pinehurst, N.C., was employed at N.C. Memorial Hospital.

UNC Debate Team draws high honors

by Ethel Johnson
Staff Writer

A team with an impressive record, but little publicity, is the UNC Debate Team. The team has had tremendous scoring success and has already been a big winner this year.

The main debaters for the varsity team are juniors Tom Dillard from High Point and Cole Campbell from Winston Salem. Both are returning top varsity debaters.

International Bazaar holds music auditions

The International Bazaar is on its way, and with it is the need for entertainers.

Ann Holton, bazaar entertainment chairman, said there is a need for musically inclined persons to perform in the bazaar's coffee shop Nov. 30-Dec. 2.

Auditions for the volunteer project will be held Monday afternoon.

For those who cannot make auditions at that time, and for information on time and place, call Ann Holton at 942-1478.

DTH ADS WORK

Top debaters for the freshman team are sophomore Jeff Allred and freshman Walker Smith, both of High Point. Smith is the top freshman recruit and will also debate on the varsity team.

The teams have outstanding records against national teams on the debate topic "Resolve that the Federal Government Should Control the Supply and Utilization of Energy in the United States." Both the freshman and varsity teams are ranked among the nation's top 10 debating teams.

Dr. Robert Cox, debate team director, said they will be going against top teams such as Harvard and Northwestern this season. He feels confident that his team will come out okay.

Cox said coaching sessions are generally held everyday but the bulk of the work is done by the student on his own time. They do their own research, attend debate workshops, and read several thousand articles per year.

On Oct. 5-7, the varsity team of Dillard and Campbell, went against Georgetown at MIT. UNC came out in third place. Dillard was named top individual debater and Campbell was rated in eighth place.

On Oct. 16-18, the top 10 teams in the nation met in the Round Robin Tournament at the University of Kentucky. UNC debaters Walker Smith and Jeff Alred, who had not debated this year, tied for second place.

In the largest tournament in the country (160 teams competing) held at Emory University in Atlanta, both varsity and freshman teams won third place.

Elections fill vacant CGC district seats

Two students were elected to seats on the Campus Governing Council in Wednesday's special election.

Jamie Ellis won the seat in the Undergraduate On-Campus District VII run-off by five votes. Ellis received 146 votes to Ben Steelman's 141. Steelman led the voting in the first election in that race last week.

In Graduate District IV, with no names on the ballot, Kem Mort was elected with nine write-in votes. Second was Gerald Fronson who received three votes. Five other candidates received one vote each.
