Pass-fail deadline set Mankiewicz to discuss Nixon's political methods

by Seth Effron Associate Editor

Frank Mankiewicz, political director for the 1972 McGovern presidential campaign, will discuss the current political climate and his recent book at 4 p.m. today at the Wesley Foundation.

Author of the newly published book, Perfectly Clear: Nixon from Whittier to Watergate, Mankiewicz will appear with UNC English professor Jim Reston. Reston worked with Mankiewicz gathering information for the book. Copies of the book will be available at the discussion.

Topics to be discussed range from Nixon politics to impeachment.

In a recent television interview Mankiewicz predicted "Gerald Ford will be president by the first of June and perhaps before."

In his book, Mankiewicz charges Nixon with a long, murky political past of using tricks that became hardened with time and use.

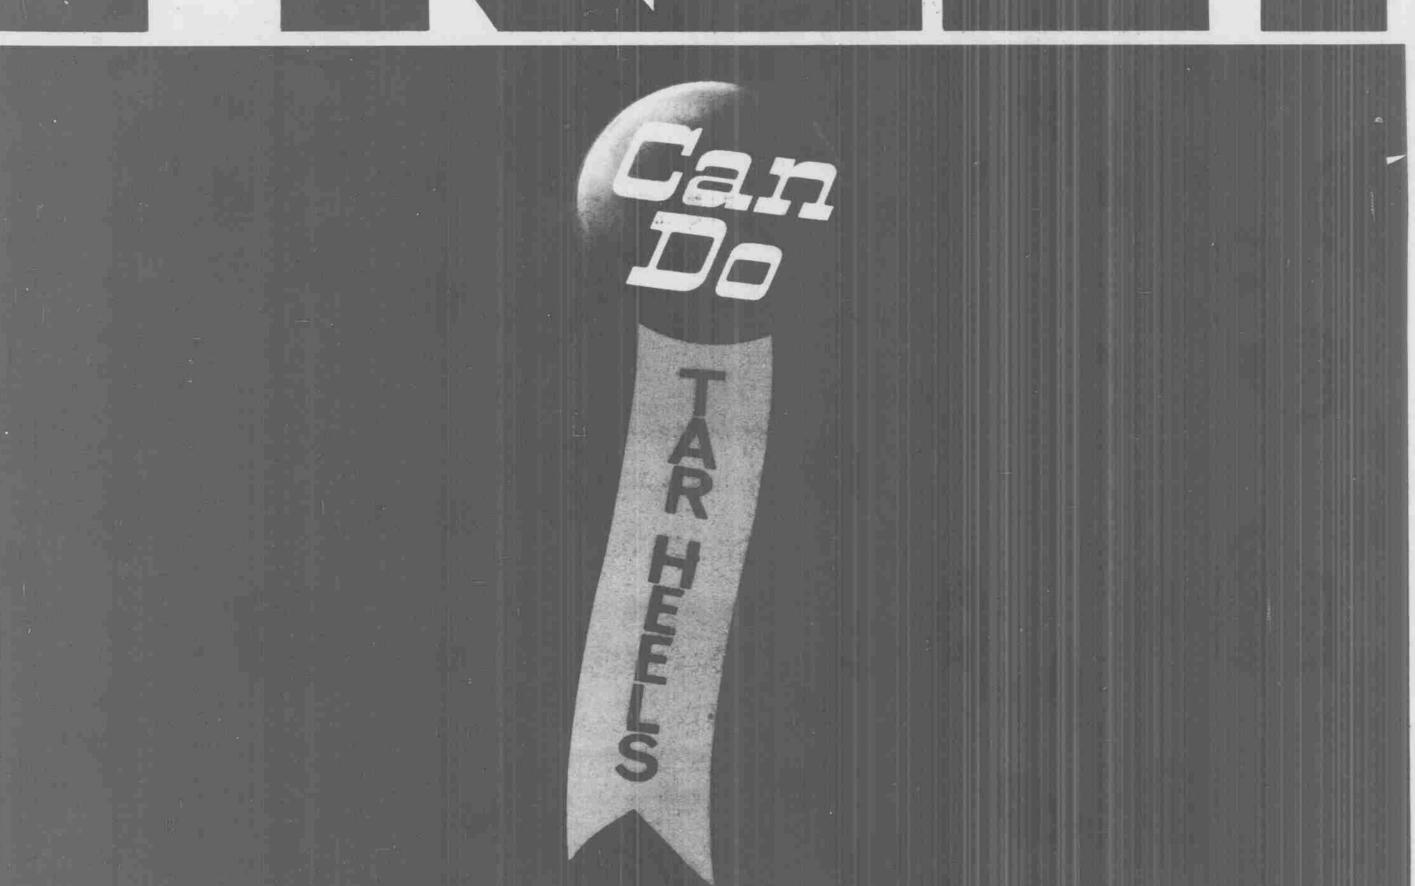

"As a college student when my classmates included Bob Haldeman and John Erlichman, I watched him (Nixon) destroy Jerry Voorhis in 1946," said Mankiewicz. In 1950 Mankiewicz ran for the California State Legislature on the same ticket as Hellen G. Dourlass "when we really saw for the first time the emergence of what we called Nixon politics, but which will be known in history as Watergate politics."

In the early sixties, Mankiewicz served as a director of Peace Corps activities in Latin America. In 1966 he became press aid to the late Robert F. Kennedy, a position he held until Kennedy's assassination in 1968.

Following his work for Kennedy, he co-authored a syndicated Washington column with Tom Barden. In May 1971 he joined the presidential campaign organization of Senator George McGovern.

Frank Mankiewicz, George McGovern's campaign director in 1972, will speak at 4 p.m. today in Wesley Foundation. He will discuss his new book on President Nixon and politics.
