

Vending, drug fund talks set

by David Klinger
Staff Writer

Tonight's meeting of the Board of Aldermen will be highlighted by discussion of two topics which have generated controversy recently: street vending and the Police Department's narcotics fund.

Discussion of Chapel Hill's street vending ordinance was scheduled for the Jan. 21 meeting by the aldermen but was later prevented by a technical objection by Alderman Alice Welsh. Tonight's review of the ordinance has been placed on the agenda and will take place, said Alderman Gerry Cohen, a leading proponent of street vending.

A ban on vending along Franklin Street after June 1971 prevented the selling of leather and craft goods along the main street.

The aldermen have hesitated in their review of the ordinance because of the feeling of some members that street vending has been a divisive issue and could lead to more controversy.

"I think people who favor reinstatement of street vending are in the majority," Cohen said. "I think that by not discussing this issue, passions will also be inflamed."

Board members will also receive a report from Police Chief William Blake on the status of a special use fund used to finance drug purchases in Chapel Hill.

As part of a larger set of budget revisions, an increase of $2,500 was proposed for the fund by town officials. The fund's present appropriation stands at $2,000, and Blake has requested the funds to help continue the operation.

Critics of the program have alleged that inaccuracies exist in the fund's bookkeeping and that the fund is used against marijuana dealers rather than hard-drug pushers.

Blake has stated that federal regulations establish strict guidelines for use of the public money and that the main direction of the program has been against hard drug pushers.

Other items scheduled for consideration include:

- A report by Town Manager Chet Kendzior on a meeting February 1 by town gas station operators concerning station closing hours and traffic tie-ups last week;
- Plans to draft a sedimentation control ordinance as part of the town's development program;
- A summary report by Kendzior on complaints from tenants received by the town about the physical condition and appearance of Bolinwood Apartments;
- A proposal to join other area communities in long-range planning under section 208 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act.

Students bring back panty raid

by Gary Dorsey
Staff Writer

A jogging, stamping group massed into the Pit Thursday night at 8:30 to await their orders. The numbers grew steadily larger and a deep bass rumble hummed.

Impatient, the pitch raised, movement accelerated. Adrenalin.

Three boys stood atop the cube searching the mob momentarily. And then, the assemblage roared "Panteezz!!"

"Raise haell," someone sang out and the stage was set in rural, rebel tones.

We're going to start with Connor."

shouted one of the boys on the cube. "Over there."

Shouting, cheers, yells, screams, the group sprinted, bolted, jogged, bumped, pushed, butted, in confusion. But with a purpose. Panty raid.

By 8:45 there was a howling mob of undergrads outside Connor harmonizing screams of "We want panties, we want panties ..."

Inside the dorm, girls searched their dressers for an old pair of drawers.

The boys pushed and jumped and hit and clawed as the underwear floated down from the third floor.

"It's good to see people get into something wholesome," one girl squealed.

One girl didn't seem to like the affair, though.

"Not hardly. I think it's absurd. I'm disgusted, offended, ..."

At the other dorms girls like this one vented their anger by dumping trashcans of water on the maddened crowd.

The USA Grappling Foundation headed by "Gint" headed the mob. The mob of 200 raiders channeled through campus hitting almost every girls' dorm.

As each dorm was ravaged a guy waving a grappling hook would shout, "Follow the hook, follow the hook."

The mob was followed across the campus by policemen, media people and casual spectators.

A campus policeman chewed gum and watched the events with his hands in his pockets.

A young man from WCAR bolted in and out of the mob lecturing into his microphone detailing each as if he were covering the war on the Western front.

By 10:45 the mob had reached its last stop. Their numbers had dropped to about 75 and the enthusiasm was nearly gone.

The young man from WCAR was drenched with water and was trying to get his waterlogged tape recorder to work.

Someone in the crowd was yelling up to the girls on the balconies, "Let's have something for the DTH Legal Defense Fund."

And on a hill overlooking the scene, "Gint" stood like a young Napoleon, talking about the success of the venture and campus unity.

"There'll be more activities from us in the future," he said. And smiled.

Psych program combats anxiety

A member of the UNC Psychology Department will be conducting a research program for the second year in a row, designed to help students who experience severe anxiety about exams.

Many students who "clutch" or "freeze" during exams often do worse than they should.

The program will be geared directly toward test-anxiety, not psychoanalysis. The technique used has been found to be quite successful in reducing serious or severe test-anxiety.

The program will run for approximately 10 weeks, with a one-hour session each week, and will finish before final exams.

Any undergraduate student who feels he is test-anxious, or feels that test anxiety does interfere with his academic performance, should attend one of the Introductory Meetings held at 7:30 p.m., today and Tuesday, Feb. 4-5, in Room 110 of Davie Hall.

The program is free and open to any UNC undergraduate. All participants are assured of the confidential handling of any information they may give.

If any student is unable to attend either meeting, contact Dave MacNeill, 929-6797, anytime after 6 p.m.

Craige petition sparks charges

A petition to determine the desirability of an all-graduate housing unit has sparked accusations of an attempt to force all undergraduates out of Craige Graduate Center.

John Sawyer, Craige president, said the petition was in no way discriminatory against the lower classmen.

"We have no notion of kicking the undergrads out," Sawyer said. "However, we would like to see Craige become exclusively graduate in the near future."

The five-question petition, circulated last week, asked in what school the resident was enrolled, if he thought graduate dorms should be maintained for graduates only, the month he was accepted at UNC and the month the resident applied for university housing.

Several unidentified undergrad residents of Craige said the petition was another try to push them out of their dorm. Undergraduate student government representatives were not available for comment Sunday afternoon.

Becoming a physician is a tremendous satisfaction.

Let us give you the job satisfaction that should go with it.

Whether you're still in medical school with the rigors of three to five years of graduate medical education still to be faced, or are already a practicing physician, it's our opinion that the Air Force can offer both professional and personal satisfaction hard to duplicate in civilian life.

An overstatement? Not if you consider the specifics.

Take the problem of graduate medical education. It's a period of your life the Air Force can make considerably easier with comfortable salary and living conditions.

Creature comforts aside, the Air Force offers professional advantages. Besides receiving training in your own specialty, you'd be in contact with physicians in all of the medical specialties. You'll function in an environment which is intellectually stimulating and professionally challenging.

Not all physicians pursue post residency fellowships. But if you are interested, the Air Force conducts them both in-house and at civilian institutions.

The physician already in practice can look forward to other things. If you want training in the practice of the medicine of the future, you'll find it in the Air Force. For example, there's emphasis on group medicine and preventive medicine, and the growing specialty of "family physician." Whatever your interest, there are few specialties which are not being practiced in today's Air Force.

The physician starting his practice in civilian life has to take into account the cost of setting up an office. The physician commencing his practice in the Air Force does not. He finds his office established for him. Supplies and equipment readily available. He has many options available to him when treating patients. For example, he can consult with Air Force specialists. He also has referral to other Air Force facilities via aeromedical evacuation. Last, but not least, are the satisfactions that come with having the opportunity for regular follow-ups, and a missed appointment rate that is practically nil.

Whether you are already a physician, or soon to become one, you might find it extremely interesting to find out what the Air Force has to offer. We think it could be a real eye-opener. If you'll mail in the coupon, we'd be happy to send you detailed information.
