

Solzhenitsyn arrested

MOSCOW—Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, the Nobel prizewinning author who has become a worldwide symbol of resistance to the Soviet state, was arrested Tuesday at his Moscow apartment and taken to the state prosecutor's office, his family said.

"I'm not going voluntarily," Solzhenitsyn's wife Natalya quoted him as saying when police forced their way into his home after the writer twice refused to answer summonses from the prosecutor.

"It was a violent arrest," she told western newsmen. She quoted the police as saying 55-year-old writer would be "home soon."

Solzhenitsyn, who won the Nobel prize for literature in 1970 for his writings about Stalinist repression in Russia, has been under attack in the Soviet press since the publication in Paris Dec. 28 of his book, The Gulag Archipelago.

He had ignored orders Saturday and Monday to appear for questioning, telling Soviet authorities they should "learn to obey the law themselves."

"We tried to hold them out but we were pushed away," said Mrs. Solzhenitsyn's mother. "They were terribly rough. They forcibly took away Alexander Isayevich."

Mrs. Solzhenitsyn and her mother said the police arrived at the central Moscow apartment shortly after 5 p.m.

The younger woman said she answered the doorbell and saw two men, one with a document identifying himself as from the state prosecutor's office.

Solzhenitsyn appeared at the door and several men forced their way inside, she said. "Alexander Isayevich said, 'I'm not going voluntarily,'" Mrs. Solzhenitsyn said.

She said a policeman replied: "Then we will have to take you away by force. Get ready. Get dressed."

Drivers say no

RALEIGH—Striking drivers rejected Tuesday a contract offered by Carolina Trailways, Inc., to end a walkout that began 65 days ago.

The drivers voted 288-24 against a proposal that would change the contract date and the base date for cost of living increases in salary and boost wages. The voting by mail began Jan. 21.

H. L. Creech, president of the company, was unavailable for comment on the results of the ballot.

Berkely Newbill, president of Local 1437 of the Amalgamated Transit Union, said the vote exonerated the Union's negotiating committee.

"The company had indicated that we didn't represent the membership," said Newbill.

The strike began Dec. 9 by drivers seeking higher wages. The company agreed to increase salaries but wanted to begin the contract at the settlement date instead of last Nov. 16 when the old contract expired. The union objected.

"That would mean substantial loss," said Newbill. "The cost of living has increased substantially in the last few months."

Post Office finds Nixon subpoena

WASHINGTON—The Postal Service said Tuesday it had located and delivered to Superior Court the missing subpoena ordering President Nixon to appear as a witness in a White House "plumbers" trial in Los Angeles.

A spokesman said the letter containing the subpoena, sent Feb. 4 by certified mail as most official documents are sent, turned up in a Washington post office and was sent to the District of Columbia Superior Court immediately.

He could not immediately explain how it got delayed in the mail.

"We suspect the Friday snowstorm had something to do with it," the spokesman said.

British miners reject pay proposal

LONDON—The striking coal miners' union Tuesday rejected a proposal by a group of anonymous businessmen to finance a limited pay raise for miners who would return to work while negotiations were held with the government Coal Board.

"The strike continues," a union spokesman said after a three-hour emergency meeting of the miners' union executive committee.

The offer was presented Monday by Godfrey Bradman, speaking for an anonymous group of wealthy industrialists.

Nazi reprisal still raises controversy

ROME—An Italian criminal court agreed Tuesday to rule on the still controversial question of whether the late Pope Pius XII could have averted the Nazi reprisal slaughter of 335 Romans during World War II.

"It is the first that an Italian court will judge the actions of a Pope," public prosecutor Giorgio Santacrose said.

The panel of three magistrates set March 5 for trial of a defamation suit brought by a niece of the late pontiff against the film Massacre in Rome, which contended that Pius might have been able to prevent the killings but chose not to for political reasons.

French balk at plan

WASHINGTON—France refused to go along with 12 other nations attending a conference of oil-hungry countries Tuesday in supporting American proposals for a carefully coordinated response to the Arab oil embargo and stiff price increases.

The impasse threatened to delay publication of a communique which would have represented the industrial world's answer to the Arabs.

After an hour-long meeting with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger seeking to find common ground for a communique, French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert said no communique would be issued Tuesday night, as originally anticipated.

"Perhaps tomorrow," he said with a shrug.

The bitterness of the closed-door debate became evident with the release of official texts of speeches delivered Monday by Jobert and the West German finance minister, Helmut Schmidt.

The nine Common Market nations lined up 8 to 1 against France.

Free food for ransom

BERKELEY, Calif.—The Symbionese Liberation Army Tuesday sent the father of kidnaped Patricia Hearst a recording of the girl's voice assuring him she was "okay" and a letter demanding a free food handout to the needy that could cost more than $130 million.

The 19-year-old Patricia, speaking in a listless tone interspersed with sighs, said she was a "prisoner of war" and pleaded with her newspaper publisher father to meet her kidnappers' demands as the only way she would be released unharmed.

The shadowy terrorist organization indicated it intended to hold the pretty, sandy-haired sophomore at least five more weeks until the distribution of $70 worth of food is given to each of the millions of poor and needy California cities from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

There are 1.9 million people on welfare in the state. There are also 2.5 million Californians receiving some kind of Social Security benefits.

The recording by Miss Hearst, dated Feb. 8, was sent to Berkeley radio station KPFA which also received the first communication from the SLA after the girl was carried screaming from her apartment Feb. 4.

"Mom, Dad, I'm okay," it began. "I had a few scrapes and stuff, but they washed them up and they're getting okay and I caught a cold but they're giving me pills for it and stuff. I'm not being starved or beaten or unnecessarily frightened ...

"I'm kept blindfolded usually so that I can't identify anyone. My hands are often tied, but generally they're not. I'm not gagged or anything. I'm comfortable and I think you can tell that I'm not really terrified or anything and I'm okay."

Asked if he would meet the "ransom" terms, Hearst said the family would "try to make every gesture of good faith" but that he could say nothing more until he had time to study the message.

'New oil' price cut seen by Simon aide

WASHINGTON—The Federal Energy Office (FEO) may move on its own shortly to roll back the price of new domestic oil, a top aide to William E. Simon said Tuesday.

With Congress still fighting over possible rollback legislation, the FEO could act on its own "within the next week and a half," Gerald Parsky said.

The action has been under consideration "for several weeks" and a study has been made of the problem, Parsky said.

The action would apply to so-called new domestic oil production. Under the present system, the price of old oil is controlled at $5.25 a barrel. But new oil—oil produced since 1972—is not controlled and sells for about $10 a barrel.

One of the actions being considered could set the price of new oil at $7.87 a barrel—50 per cent higher than the control price of $5.25 a barrel.

Parsky said the Federal Energy Office also was considering proposals to allow oil price variances.

New oil production and so-called stripper wells—which produce less than 10 barrels a day and are also uncontrolled—make up about 25 per cent of the nation's domestic oil production.

In testimony before Congress, Simon indicated that he would favor a partial rollback of oil prices.

Gas plan introduced

RALEIGH—Sen. D. Livingston Stallings (D-Craven) Tuesday introduced a voluntary gas rationing program.

Stallings' measure was introduced only a few hours after Sen. Robert Barker (R-Wake) announced he would introduce later this week a joint resolution calling on the governor to set up a rationing program similar to that now in operation in Oregon.

Both Barker and Stallings' proposals would limit gas sales during the week based on the last number of vehicle license plates. Cars with an even numbered last digit would be able to purchase gas on even calendar dates; those with odd number last digits would be able to buy gas on odd-calendar dates.

Gasoline purchases on Saturdays would be on a first-come, first serve basis as long as supplies were available.
