Making office more accessible

Audit Board gets new by-laws

by David Ennis Staff Writer

The Campus Governing Council has established new by-laws for the Student Audit Board aimed at making the board more visible and open to students. David Putnam, chairman of the Audit Board, said.

The CGC approved the new by-laws, along with amendments suggested by the council's Finance Committee, in its Feb. 19

"In the past, the Audit Board has been behind the scenes," Putnam said. "I don't know how many students are even aware of its existence," he said.

He said the new laws attempt to make the office more accessible to students. The new laws include provision for an

"up-to-date pamphlet describing the procedures and other information needed to use the Student Activities Fund Office".

A new pamphlet will be compiled each year to aid treasurers of student organizations who work through the Activities Fund Office, Putnam said.

The Council amended a section of the bill which specified who would have the right to financial information about organizations receiving funds from the CGC.

The bill originally gave this right to supervisory boards when the financial information concerned organizations under

Men charged in gas larceny

Chapel Hill police arrested two males in the University Square parking lot early Monday morning on charges of gasoline Charged and released on $400 bond were Larry Brown, 23, of 506 Whitaker St., Chapel Hill and Cornell Daniels, 19, of 25-C Taylor St., Durham. A complainant who observed the attempted theft reported to police that the two men left their own vehicle, walked to the rear of a maroon Pontiac, and later returned with a container of gas.

with the town Police Department, reported that Monday's theft has been one of several reported to his department.

"We've had a few cases reported, but most are from people wanting increased police patrols in their nieghborhood," Gold said. "It hasn't been confined to one particular area and is not a big problem in relation to the whole energy situation, although I'm sure it's going to increase," he said.

Mystery candidate holds debate in pit

Mystery Politico accused the other student body presidential candidates of being politicos who were running for their own personal gain in a debate at the pit Monday.

The debate, initiated by Mystery Politico, drew only three other candidates and a crowd of about 60 students.

Mystery Politico described the other candidates as "big shots" who were trying to get into graduate school. The masked candidate critisized the other candidates for wasting paper on campaign posters. He said he has spent only $5 in his campaign. Mystery Politico also critisized Student Body President Ford Runge for conducting closed meetings of activities that concern student funds.

Robert Hackney called Mystery Politico the "biggest ego tripper" in the campaign. Hackney said Mystery Politico made the same campaign promises as other candidates despite claiming that he is not just another politico. Hackney described himself as a "politico who is not mysterious."

Candidate Lew Warren called for more interaction between student government and students. Warren admitted that most of the candidates were saying the same thing but added that this was because student government is now inadequate.

After the debate Geoff Hulse, one of Mystery Politico's campaign managers, called the DTH and denied a story in Monday's paper that said he might be Mystery Politico.

Senior to aid Morgan's race

by Art Eisenstadt Staff Writer

Dennis Wicker, a UNC senior, has been named by State Attorney General Robert Morgan to coordinate his U.S. Senate campaign on campus. Morgan is seeking the Lt. Arnold Gold, communications officer Democratic nomination for the seat which will be vacated by Sam Ervin next January.

Wicker, a native of Sanford, has been working with the Morgan Senate campaign since Morgan announced for the seat Jan.

Wicker first met Morgan in 1965, when Wicker's father served in the state legislature as a representative from Lee County, and Morgan was a state senator from neighboring Harnett County.
