ECOS recycles papers

by Ronald McDonald Staff Writer

ECOS, a local environmental organization, is beginning this week a pilot door-to-door newspaper recycling project in the Briarcliff and Colony Woods sections of Chapel Hill.

Larry Kehrer, ECOS director of recycling, said door-to-door recycling in the city will be continued and expanded if this week's venture is successful.

ECOS representatives for the several weeks have been contacting residents of Briarcliff and Colony Woods and asking them to save newspapers for this week's pickup. Kehrer said the response has been "50 percent good... and 50 per administration," she said.

News in brief

"Only one person said he usually threw his papers away, but he said he'd save his papers anyway," Kehrer added. Kehrer said according to his count, about 500 houses have been contacted and will have their newspapers picked up by ECOS this week.

Kehrer said he hopes to get a two-ton load of papers this week, which he said ECOS would sell to a recycling center for $40.

If this week's project is successful, Kehrer forsees, possibly within a year, a comprehensive recycling project in Chapel Hill.

"This is a wish and a guess," Kehrer said, "but we'd like to see dumpsters that would be available to every office and dorm on campus. In the city we'd be recycling newspapers, magazines, aluminum and glass." He said he envisions alternate weekly collectionpaper one week, and glass and aluminum the next—of these items from every house and apartment building in Kehrer said he is unsure of the manpower such an operation would require, but he said he doesn't expect the operation to be too profitable.

What ECOS is planning to do, Kehrer said, is create a "cooperative living situation." We'll rent a large house with a lot of land and cheap rent," he said. "We'll try to grow some of our own food and we'll be cutting expenses way down.

"One of the things we expect to prove is that, while recycling is only marginally profitable for a standard worker, we hope to alter our lifestyle and show that recycling can be profitable to us," Kehrer said. The members of the cooperative would man the recycling project and live on the profits. The campus recycling would be handled by volunteers, he said.

Kehrer said it is possible the town will help the recycling project, but city representatives so far have said only that they are interested. The town manager could not be reached for comment.

Kehrer said a basic need for the recycling project, one which the town has been unable to help with, is for a central storage location in Chapel Hill.

"We are at the point where we are about to decide on some action. I want discussion from the Board of Aldermen and some definite feelings on possible expansion of the proposed system," said Lee.

Basically the expansion would increase campus shuttle service to parking areas and storage lots to offset the expected heavy demand by UNC students for campus bus transportation.

Lee has scheduled a meeting with University officials later this week to discuss the changes and accompanying costs to the University.

During their regular session, board members approved a request by Piedmont Electric to construct a power substation and erect transmission lines off Smith Level Rd. in Carrboro.

Action on the special use application came after several weeks of deliberation by the aldermen and members of the Department of Urban Development (DUD) over the visual impact that the project would have on the community.

DUD Director Kurt Jenne advised that construction of the substation would not cause an adverse impact on the area and would not be a determining factor in the development of surrounding land.
