

Maryl Levine resigns

Aldermen defer bus plan action

by David Klinger
Staff Writer

The $300,000 university bus contract was received Monday by the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen in a late-night work session specifically called to discuss the transit proposal.

Action was deferred until the Board of Aldermen's next meeting March 25.

The contract, a revised version of the previously discussed figure of $250,000, met with lengthy discussion as the aldermen questioned the part the UNC administration will play in the determination of bus schedules and routes.

Board members appeared concerned that approval of the contract might bind the town to a potentially unworkable system.

The $50,000 increase in the University's share of the transit system would provide for shuttle service between the central campus and outlying parking lots at Horace Williams Airport and University Mall.

The $300,000 portion of the community bus system would be fulfilled by the University purchasing long-term bus passes for resale to students and commuters to the campus.

Board members plan to spend the next week attempting to clarify their questions about the plan to expand the system and then to act on the contract at their March 25 meeting. Approval by the aldermen would send the bus contract to the UNC Board of Trustees on April 12 for action.

The resignation of Assistant Town Manager Maryl Levine was announced by Chapel Hill Mayor Howard Lee during the regular session of the board meeting.

Levine, who has served in her administrative capacity since February 1972, will become assistant director of the Institute for Policy Sciences and Public Affairs at Duke University.

In other actions, the aldermen approved an ordinance under the town fire code calling for improved fire control systems in area high rise buildings.

The amendment, which applies to buildings over 50 feet in height, requires automatic sprinkler systems, voice communication systems and building evacuation plans for all high rise complexes.

Fire Chief Everett Lloyd advised the aldermen that the ordinance cannot apply to buildings on the UNC campus since state fire regulations would supercede local requirements.

Following discussion of the new regulations, the aldermen approved a resolution charging Lloyd with the responsibility of informing University officials about the fire control requirements and about safety precautions the University can take voluntarily.

In a related action, an amendment to the town fire code requiring automatic sprinkler protection in all convalescent and old age homes was approved.

Mayor Lee announced appointments to the Central Business District (CBD) implementation team. Serving on the downtown renewal committee will be Aldermen Tommy Gardner, Gerry Cohen and Shirley Marshall.

The committee will also be comprised of members from the Chapel Hill Planning Board, the Appearance Commission and the town administrative staff. Marshall will serve as chairman of the group.

Recently presented to the aldermen, the final CBD study committee report calls for considerable remodeling of the downtown business district through creation of pedestrian walkways, office buildings and apartments, rerouting of automobile traffic with emphasis on the new community bus system, and acquisition of several buildings for public use by the town.

These objectives would be under the supervision of a Downtown Redevelopment Corporation.

UNC policemen air grievances

Campus policemen, along with their attorney, and University personnel representatives met for more than three hours Monday with the University Staff Grievance Committee.

The closed meeting was the third step in the state personnel grievance procedure. The policemen say they are unhappy with changes in their work shift schedule.

Both the policemen who attended and their attorney, Roy Cole, declined to comment on the meeting.

Dr. Gerald Barrett, chairman of the grievance committee, said the three-member committee will make its recommendation to the Chancellor, who will decide the issue.

The grievance concerns a new shift arrangement involving an exchange program begun in February. Under this arrangement officers serve two weeks on each of the two shifts other than their regular shift.

Prior to February, new policemen worked the night shift until there was an opening on the afternoon shift. Officers with the most seniority worked the day shift.

The policemen have said they fear the exchange program is a wedge to full rotation.

The officers have said they were hired with the unwritten agreement that the fixed shift would be maintained.

Ted Marvin, director of security services, said he felt the exchange program is fair to the men and said it was begun to improve campus police service.

Marvin said he attended the meeting, but that the management side of the issue was presented by Jack Gunnells, University personnel director, and Allen Waters, director of operations and engineering.

SCAU plans shopping guide

by Jim Roberts
Staff Writer

Shopping in Chapel Hill can sometimes be a pain in the neck as well as a pain in the pocketbook. It takes awhile to find what you need at the cheapest price.

Next year, though, students should find their shopping tasks easier as the Student

Consumer Action Union (SCAU) plans to publish over the summer a guide to merchants in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro area.

Jane Clark, newly elected chairman of SCAU, said the guide will contain a listing of each merchant who might provide any sort of service for the students. Excluding restaurants, the guide will list comparative prices of every kind of merchant operation in the area.

Clark said the handbook should be ready when students return for the fall semester. She said the guide will be "good for new students who might think that Franklin Street is the only place to shop in Chapel Hill."

SCAU is also tentatively planning to sponsor the food co-op plan proposed by defeated presidential candidate Murray Fogler. The co-op will be set up if SCAU's budget is passed by the Campus Governing Council.

According to the plan, students would be able to get produce, fruit, canned goods, eggs and soft drinks at 10 per cent above wholesale prices. This would represent a 20 per cent to 30 per cent decrease from present grocery store prices.

Students would place orders from a prepared order form and pay when they got the food. To make use of the service the students would be obligated to give up two hours per week to help with either bagging, delivery or distribution of the food.

Clark noted that the co-op is tentatively planned to operate out of Battle House with full time staff and a co-op manager.

SCAU is also working on this month's bread-basket survey, a comparative survey of grocery prices in Chapel Hill. Also, SCAU is lobbying in the N.C. General Assembly for a bill which would protect tenants and improve landlord-tenant relations, Clark said.

Investigations of Servomation and the utilities are being carried out by SCAU which, White said, is willing to investigate things in which students as a whole are interested.

Williams takes staff applications

Student Body President-elect Marcus Williams will hold interviews for Suite C assistantships today, Thursday and Friday.

Williams, who will be inaugurated Thursday, said he will nominate Murray Fogler to be his executive assistant. Fogler ran for president in the general election and finished third.

Students interested in serving as treasurer should call Suite C, 933-5201, to arrange interviews with Williams.

The new attorney general will be chosen from the present attorney general's staff in accordance with the Judicial Reform bill, Attorney General Reid James said. James said he would recommend four staff members to assume the post. They are: Nita Mitchell, Larry Larson and Chan Hardwick, all staff assistants; and Ralph Pitts, who has been on the staff for three years.

The presidential inauguration will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday in room 202 Union. The public is invited.

Editor interviews set

The Publications Board will hold interviews for the editorship of the Carolina Quarterly, March 28 at 3:30 p.m. in the Carolina Union. Candidates should bring a resume and letters of recommendation to the interview. The interview room number can be obtained at the Union desk. Anyone with further questions should call Richard Robertson (933-2426) or Mark Dearmon (967-7608).
