

Breaking and entering Police detain juveniles

Two youths, aged 11 and 13, were detained by police late Friday afternoon after Marvin McCauley of 113-C Stephens St. caught the suspects breaking a window at his home. Juvenile officials charged the two youths with breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny.

Health seminar to begin

A three-day workshop examining issues, problems and progress in health administration graduate education will be held today at the Carolina Inn. The "First Inter-university Workshop for Programs in Health Administration in Schools of Public Health" will be sponsored by the Department of Health Administration of the UNC School of Public Health. Program heads from 12 universities will attend the program. A two-day workshop examining national health insurance and its implications for the people, practitioners, institutions and programs of North Carolina will be held Thursday and Friday following the administration workshop. The Health Administration Department, with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, will sponsor the event. The workshop will provide a forum for a grass roots look at what national health insurance will mean to the state.

Police subsequently found a lawnmower taken from the residence of Wayne Shew, 108 Noble St., in the basement of one of the juvenile's homes. He was later charged with larceny of the lawnmower.

Two arrests made

Chapel Hill Police officers arrested Paul A. Saltzman and Charles A. Stanford Saturday night on charges of second degree burglary and larceny of stereo equipment from a private residence. Saltzman, 17, of 717 Emery Drive, was released on $7,500 bond and Stanford, 18, of 1420 Whitehead Drive, on $8,000 bond. Stanford, the son of state representative Trish Stanford Hunt of Chapel Hill, was also charged by police with assault on an officer. Police were called to the home of Dr. Robert Nelson, 903 Coker Drive, at 11:30 p.m. Saturday, where the arrests occurred.
