

Food cooperative open

Helps residents beat high food prices

In a year during which food prices have risen sharply, Chapel Hill residents now have an opportunity to save as much as 30 per cent on food costs.

The Student Consumer Action Union (SCAU) Food Cooperative is now accepting members for the coming year, chairman Marie Jones said Wednesday. The co-op is a group which buys foods in bulk at wholesale prices, direct from the distributor.

"Basically, we want to get a lot of people together so we can buy in bulk," co-op worker Debra Ingram said. "The more people we have, the less everyone has to pay. We expect to spend about 30 per cent less than retail grocery prices."

Individual orders are flexible—members may order as much or as little as they wish. Total group orders, however, must be in sufficient quantities to buy at wholesale costs. Fresh produce, cheeses and natural foods are available now. Canned foods and refrigerated items may be added in the future.

Members pay a $5 fee each year. Each must also work one-and-one-half hours per month at the distribution center, located at the Multi-Purpose Center on Church and School Streets.

Interested people are urged to attend a meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, Oct. 7, in the Union. Membership fees will be accepted and details discussed.

Fresh produce will be purchased at the Farmer's Market in Raleigh. Natural foods and cheeses will be ordered from the manufacturers. Although bought at wholesale, a 10 per cent mark-up will be added, Ingram said, to cover transportation costs and taxes. Orders will be paid for when picked up. Members rotate picking up the food, bagging it and handling distribution.

RHA board dismisses amendment

by Frank Griffin
Staff Writer

An amendment to the Residence Hall Association (RHA) constitution adopted Sept. 18 was challenged and subsequently dropped Tuesday night when RHA presidential candidate Betsy Jones charged the amendment's adoption procedure violated the Student Constitution.

The RHA Governing Board, which initiated the amendment, had said they wanted a ruling on the amendment from the student Supreme Court, but acting RHA president Jim Cohn signed a letter of dismissal on behalf of the board Tuesday night.

The amendment would have allowed graduate students in Craig Graduate Center to join RHA, but the Student Constitution says RHA is an undergraduate organization.

Jones filed an injunction with the Supreme Court after the amendment was adopted by the Men's and Women's Residence Councils on September 18. The RHA Governing Board has deemed the amendment "minor," a label that allowed it to be ratified within the RHA organization without facing a campus-wide vote.

Charges of railroading had been leveled against former RHA president Mike O'Neal for steering the amendment through RHA. At the time it was passed, the amendment made O'Neal eligible to run again for RHA president, an office he was forced to resign because of his housing assignment in Craige.

O'Neal has since moved to undergraduate housing in Granville Towers, however, so failure of the amendment did not affect his candidacy.

"If RHA wanted to strike the word undergraduate from their constitution, it would first have to be struck from the Student Constitution," Jones said Wednesday, "and that would take a campus-wide referendum." Jones said the Student Constitution superseded the authority of the RHA constitution.

"I didn't disagree with the amendment itself," Jones said, "only with the procedure by which it was adopted."
